CUTTING WIRES

Camptown Herrick Telephone Company Allege Bad Work on Lines.

The Camptown-Herrick telephone company and the Bell system have been using the same poles on which to string their wires in some instances. This arrangement has proven mutually agreeable till last week when Bell workmen went along the line between here and Stevensville and wherever they found a Camptown-Herrick wire hanging on their poles, the nippers were at once used and the wires were cut and left dangling in the road.

This same trick was worked by the Bell-workmen in the western part of the county and there is war between the Independents and the Bell in that section. What there will be up the Wyalusing creek time alone will tell.—Wyalusing Rocket.

VALLEY PHONE COMPANY
USING NEW EXCHANGE

Without any impressive ceremony the Sayre and Athens subscribers of the Valley Phone Company were cut into the new exchange, and the magnificent new switchboard was put into operation at 1:30 this morning. The Waverly subscribers will be put on the new board very soon.

The new switchboard is a wonderful piece of workmanship. It is constructed with all the latest paraphernalia designed to make life and service easy for the subscriber and the operator too. There is room for ten local help girls and one long distance operator. Every one of the local girls has wires connecting with all the subscribers within arm's reach.

"WHEN WOMEN LOVE"

One of the most sensational and realistic scenes in "When Women Love," the play which comes to the Loomis Saturday, Oct. 7, is the trial scene, in which an innocent young girl is accused of killing her uncle, and who would have been convicted but for the startling evidence given by the Columbia graphophone, upon which a conversation has been recorded by the villains, which is repeated at the trial in their natural voices. The audience is held spellbound while the machine gives its evidence.
