Prominent Visitor

Athens--Mrs. Louise S. Comstock and her daughter Sarah of New York city, came to Athens last night on the late train and will remain for a time to greet former friends. Mrs. Comstock was one of the Saltmarsh family, who were among the most prominent in the early social circles of this valley.

Her husband, Walter Comstock, was a son of Charles Comstock, and together they were associated in the commercial business of the town for a long period of years. Walter Comstock, (Col. Dick, as we used to call him), was one of the leading spirits of Athens society up to the time he went west.
