ATHENS

PROTECTION HOSE CO. OBSERVES NATAL DAY

Athen's Oldest Fire Fighting Organization Celebrates Fiftieth Anniversary In An Appropriate Manner Last Night.

Athen's—Yesterday was a great day for Athens, not that the dignity of the people was in any way imperiled, but from the fact that the intense sympathies of all its inhabitants were awakened to pay homage to those deserving of the tribute. The fiftieth anniversary exercises of Protection hose company No. 1 were held last evening at Elsbree opera house.

From the attendance last night it can truthfully be said that all citizens wished to show their appreciation of what the company has done for the town. Elsbree opera house was profusely decorated with flags and it was the exclamation on everybody's lips: "What a beautiful transformation."

At 8:30 we marched to the opera house with our ladies and were conducted to our places around the tables which were decorated with flowers that seemed to assure us of the good things coming. The ladies of the M. E. church had provided the etables and they were marshalled under the leadership of Mrs. Leslie Farnsworth, who showed admirable taste and generalship in many ways.

Mr. Beaman first explained how this gathering came to be inaugurated, and how Kibb Harris and Thad Newman had put them in mind of it through a jovial conversation during one of their meetings, and how it had proved a reality in the grand feast and company in attendance.

C. T. Hull next gave a historical sketch of the first organization and some of its experiences in early times. Chas. E. Mills, Esq., followed with a humorous and interesting account on firemen's conventions. J. M. Ely, who was instrumental in reorganizing, was on the program but was not present.

Rev. E. J. Rosengrant was next introduced and gave an eloquent talk on the "Elements of Character and Influence on the Young in the Formation Period." Hon. L. T. Hoyt gave a good natured talk on modern history. Dr. E. M. Crawford responded to "The Ladies." His remarks were brief, modest and interesting.

Rev. W. G. Simpson was called upon and responded with touching accounts of the heroism of the volunteer fireman. This ended the program, and each guest arose from the table with the most intense feeling of gratitude toward the noble boys of Protection Hose company. They have shown themselves generous hearted as well as brave firemen. May they live long and be happy. The Aeolian orchestra dispensed sweet music throughout the evening.

New York Man Has Compassion on Fire Horses and Provides a Home.

If there is any one class of horses deserving of special care and consideration above any other, it is surely the faithful animals who serve the public in the fire department of our big cities. It is gratifying to record the fact that a true lover of dumb animals has risen up in the person of Nicholas F. Brady, one of the youngest of Wall street's successful men, who proposes to see that those worthy old veterans of the fire wagons are hereafter treated according to their just deserts.
