AMERICANS CAN DO IT

Engineer Says Panama Canal Will Be Ready by 1915.

TWENTY-FOUR THOUSAND WORKERS

Letter of Expert Randolph Forecasts Report of Commissioners. He Has Recently Returned From the Isthmus.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—The isthmian canal commission has made public a letter written by Isham Randolph, a member of the board of consulting engineers of the Panama canal, to Zina R. Carter, president of the sanitary district of Chicago, which embodies the views of Mr. Randolph concerning canal matters.

He has recently returned from a visit to Panama with other members of the board, and his opinions are interesting and in view of the publication of the letter by the commission may be considered semi-official.

In his letter Mr. Randolph says: "What we do know is that it can be done, that Americans can do it and that in as short a time as so stupendous an undertaking can be put through. We do know that almost limitless resources await the demand of the builders and that the builders represent the highest grade of American engineering talent, led on by a man whose record of accomplishment is 'but the earnest of the things that be shall do.'"

"Hence we may reasonably look for the passage of the great ocean freighters from the Caribbean to the Pacific before our calendars are headed 1915. How much before, this deponent sayeth not. This is no easy triumph for the builders who must contend with and overcome difficulties not encountered in our temperate zone. First there are climatic difficulties which my investigations force me to believe have been magnified and exaggerated. The question of proper housing has been a problem, but its solution is progressing and it has had to wait upon lumber which must come from the states.

"The French left behind them some 2,500 buildings, little and big, which are being made habitable, but many more must be built to house the thousands whose labors are required to accomplish the work. When the equipment is on hand and the organization perfected at least 24,000 men will be required in the various departments of industry."

J., Oct. 25.—Miss Ella Price, who lives with her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Winfield Price, at Cedar Grove, was found unconscious on the front porch of her home, with her clothes partly torn off, her hair disarranged and bruises on her throat, made by an assailant for whom the police are looking. The police think that the body, which had evidently been in the water for several weeks, was carried downstream by recent floods. The absence of the head was attributed to the action of decomposition.

ROOSEVELT'S TOUR.

Visits Tuskegee, Montgomery, Birmingham and Memphis.

AT BOOKER WASHINGTON'S COLLEGE

Welcomed Under Beautiful Arches Built of Cotton—Address to Colored Students—Duty of Negro and White Men Laid Down.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Oct. 25.—President Roosevelt arrived here today on his tour of the south. He had spent the night in his special car, his train having left Birmingham, Ala., last evening.

The whole city lent itself to the reception of President Roosevelt during his stay. There was general decoration of all the streets along the route of the presidential party.

President Roosevelt put in a strenuous day in Alabama by visits to Tuskegee, Montgomery and Birmingham, where his reception, in keeping with those given him all through the south, was hearty and soul stirring. His day began with visits to the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute and to the Methodist Female college.

Tuskegee was beautifully decorated, a feature being arches built upon bales of cotton. The platform from which the president spoke was made from cotton worth $30,000 and in original bales.

The president was met at his train by Mayor O. S. Lewis and others, and, escorted by state militia, he was driven to the Alabama Conference Female college, which represented a typical southern scene. Cotton had been transplanted in long rows, and two old negroes with cotton pickers' sacks on their shoulders were picking the staple from the plants. Several baskets of cotton were scattered about the field. The president's address here was short, and he departed for Tuskegee Normal and Industrial school.

At the institute Mr. Roosevelt was received by Booker T. Washington and the institute's trustees and faculty. From a stand in front of the office building he viewed an educational and industrial parade, upon the preparation of which students and faculty have been at work for weeks. Behind the institute band came 1,500 students, young men and young women, all in uniform. Then came sixty-one floats, representing various phases of work in the school.

Mr. Washington introduced the president in the chapel, where the students sang plantation melodies. Mr. Roosevelt's visit, he said, "brings to the heart of every man and woman of our race in this country a degree of encouragement and inspiration which is impossible for any American citizen but of our race to appreciate."

"The white population as well as to the black it is of the utmost importance that the negro be encouraged to make himself a citizen of the highest type of usefulness. Within the last twenty years industrial operations of the south have increased so tremendously that there is a scarcity of labor almost everywhere, so that it is the part of wisdom for all who wish prosperity to the south to help the negro to become in the highest degree useful to himself and therefore to the community in which he lives."

"Your 1,500 students are not only being educated in head and heart, but also trained to industrial efficiency, for from the beginning Tuskegee has placed especial emphasis upon the training of men and women in agriculture, mechanics and household duties. Training in these three fundamental directions does not embrace all that the negro or any other race needs, but it does cover in a very large degree the field in which the negro can at present do most for himself and be most helpful to his white neighbors."

"In the interest of humanity, of justice and of self protection every white man in America, no matter where he lives, should try to help the negro help himself. It is in the interest and for the protection of the white man to see that the negro is educated. It is not only the duty of the white man, but it is to his interest to see that the negro is protected in property, in life and in all his legitimate rights."

The trip was unmarked by any special incident save at Birmingham, where, at the corner of Fifth avenue and Twentieth street, an intoxicated man in his excitement dropped a pistol from his pocket on the pavement. The president saw the incident and called the attention of officers to the man, who was immediately arrested. The president's train arrived in Birmingham promptly on time. Mayor George B. Ward, surrounded by a reception committee, delivered the formal address of welcome at the station, and immediately afterward the party entered carriages and began the march to Capitol park.

The ovation to the president was continuous and he stood in his carriage the whole way acknowledging it.

A pretty incident at the close of the march was when the president asked the name of the lady riding at the side of his carriage. Miss Sammie Harris was sponsor for Troop D, one of the local cavalry organizations. The president was introduced to her by Mayor Ward, and as he reached over to shake her hand he crowded the mayor. Excusing himself, he said, "I would run over a man any time to shake hands with a lady."

At Capitol park, under the glamour of thousands of electric lights, the party entered the speakers' stand. General Rufus N. Rhodes, editor of the Birmingham News, welcomed the president on behalf of the citizens of Birmingham.

At Montgomery the president was welcomed on behalf of the city by Congressman Wiley. Governor Jelks delivered the address of welcome for the state and introduced the president.

The president spoke briefly. He expressed appreciation of the hearty welcome, especially since it came from the first capital of the Confederacy. He touched upon the building of the isthmian canal and what it meant to the people of the south. The cotton question was also taken up by the president, and he said it was one of the country's important exports. He added:

"I shall not keep you longer. Let me just say once more that, though I came into this state, I hope, a good American and proud of my country, I shall leave this state just a little better American and a little bit prouder of my country."

THE "PIRATES" OF THE SOUND.

Otto Steffel, One of Robber Crew, Held at Newport.

NEWPORT, R. I., Oct. 25.—Although the net spread by the police of this city failed to entrap in its meshes Henry A. Jackson, who is alleged to be the captain of the "pirate" sloop Dorado, there were several developments which may aid materially to clear up the mystery surrounding the Dorado's movements along the shores of Narragansett bay and Long Island sound.

The arrest in Providence of Otto Steffel, who admitted to the police that he was associated with Jackson and his companions. Another feature of interest was the appearance of a black sloop in the harbor. The craft put out to sea before the authorities sighted her, but it is believed that on board the sloop were persons who have sailed on the Dorado recently.

Steffel was brought here from Providence last night. He was heavily manacled and was handcuffed to Deputy Sheriff's King and Harvey. An immense crowd, hearing that Steffel would be brought to this city, were at the station when the train arrived. The officers quickly placed their prisoner in a police patrol wagon and started for the jail. The crowd followed, and after the prisoner had been locked up the jail building was surrounded by curious ones.

Steffel admitted to the authorities that he had been associated with Jackson, but said that he personally had not taken any part in the stealing. Steffel said that his work consisted of caring for the plunder and disposing of it. The other members of the band, he asserted, were concerned in the stealing.

The purpose in bringing Steffel here was to have him identify the plunder found aboard the Dorado and the yacht Besse and tell the authorities where it was stolen. The Besse was also used by the thieves. Steffel said last night that the thefts occurred all along Long Island sound and the shores of Narragansett bay.
