WARSAW TOWN HALL A SHAMBLES

Emperor's Manifesto Seems to Have Let Loose All Evil Passions of Anarchists and Criminals Freed From Prisons—Lawless Attacks on Hebrews—Clashes Between Troops and People—All Like a Second French Revolution.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 2.—Dispatches from Kagan say that indescribable scenes occurred there when a mob invaded the town hall and tore down the portrait of the emperor. The troops fired ten volleys into the mob, killing forty persons. Three hundred of the rioters were arrested. During the conflict many of the troops were dismounted, thrown to the ground and some of them shot.

It was a lawyer named Rattner who cut the emperor's portrait from its frame, hacked out the face, put his head through the opening and hurled the mob from the balcony of the town hall. Later a band of workmen invaded Rattner's house and tore him to pieces.

Lawlessness, vicious attacks on Hebrews, clashes with troops and charges by Cossacks are reported from many parts of the Russian empire. In Rostov-on-Don 20,000 persons gathered in a prison square and demanded the release of sixty prisoners. Twenty-two men were released, but the more important ones were retained. The demonstrators were then dispersed by troops. Several persons were killed or wounded, and Hebrew shops were sacked.

In Elizabethgrad loyalists bearing a portrait of Emperor Nicholas marched to a cathedral and after service went to the Hebrew quarter and sacked the houses and stores. Many Hebrews were beaten or wounded, and several were killed.

In Moscow a procession of students returning from the detention prison with several of their comrades who had been liberated by order of the governor clashed with workmen at the triumphal gate. Shots were exchanged, and about a dozen were wounded on each side.

In Kremenchug a regular massacre occurred in a theater, where a public meeting to demand amnesty for political prisoners, removal of Cossacks and a constituent assembly. Cossacks suddenly entered the hall, fired five volleys into the audience and charged with drawn sabers.

In Kierson there were anti-Hebrew demonstrations. A mob armed with clubs pillaged stores and houses, burning many of them. Rioting continues. In Kagan the police and Cossacks were seemingly without any authority turned loose on the people in front of the assize court. Many school children were among the wounded. In the night after the residents had sought refuge in their homes Cossacks and police broke into and looted stores. Kotz, a Jeweler, who tried to prevent them from entering his establishment, was threatened by a police captain with death. The fatalities were larger than at first reported.

At Tver during the rioting there the governor and mayor, with the aid of the city employees, barricaded themselves inside the city hall to prevent the ingress of the mob which had gathered outside the building. Dragons were fought off by the mob, which set fire to the building. The troops eventually obtained the upper hand. The hospitals are filled with wounded.

At Kiev the populace seized the town hall, and revolutionary speeches were delivered to the crowd from the balcony when Cossacks appeared. Some of the people inside the building were armed, and a regular engagement followed, resulting in many being killed or wounded on both sides.

At Odessa fighting occurred on the outskirts of the town. A mob, incited by the police, attacked the Jews, and it is reported that hundreds were killed and wounded. It is known that thirty-seven were killed and eighty-one seriously injured in Dalnitskaya street.

At Warsaw twenty persons were killed and upward of a hundred wounded in encounters last night between the mobs and the troops. A crowd gathered before the town hall and demanded the release of political prisoners. The chief of police liberated 300 who had been arrested during the last few days, but refused to release twelve who were arrested by order of the central government. The crowd then commenced to smash the doors and windows of the town hall, whereupon the chief of police telephoned the barracks for assistance, and a force of hussars and Cossacks with a battery of artillery galloped to the scene. The hussars charged the mob, killing sixteen persons and wounding seventy-three. Later there was an encounter between infantry and a mob in the bank square, when the troops fired into the crowd, killing four and wounding thirty.

WELCOME TO LOUIS

British Fleet Under Battenberg at Annapolis.

BEARS MESSAGE TO ROOSEVELT.

Received With Naval Honors by Admirals Evans and Sands and by Governor Warfield—Prince "Dick" Has Nine Names.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 2.—Prince Louis of Battenberg, the bearer of a special message from the monarch of the British empire to the president of the United States, has set foot on American soil and been received with honors due his rank and mission by Admiral Sands, superintendent of the Naval academy, and Governor Warfield of Maryland. The joint fleet of American and British war vessels is lying in Annapolis Roads, forming by far the most brilliant naval spectacle ever seen in these waters.

As the British vessels dropped anchor off Annapolis national salutes of twenty-one guns were first exchanged between the Drake and Matine, flagships of Prince Louis and Admiral Sands respectively, and then admiral salutes of thirteen guns. Shortly after the visitor saluted Admiral Sands, superintendent of the Naval academy, with thirteen guns, and these were returned by the shore battery of the academy. Lieutenant Commandant Thomas P. Magruder, aid to Superintendent Sands, and Colonel Edmund P. Woodside, aid to Governor Warfield, were at once dispatched on a boarding call to ascertain the time when Prince Louis would come ashore, and arrangements were made for an immediate visit.

Prince Louis landed at the boathouse wharf of the Naval academy. He was accompanied by Captain Ryon, naval attaché of the British embassy at Washington; Lieutenant Gerald Soleby, flag officer of the Drake, and Lieutenant Walter B. Crossley, U. S. N., flag officer of the Maine. Standing on the wharf to receive them were Admiral Sands and his aid, Lieutenant Commander Thomas P. Magruder, and immediately fronting the landing place was a company of marines, commanded by Captain Reisinger. These presented arms as Prince Louis landed, and there was a flourish from the field music. After an exchange of formal salutes Admiral Sands and Prince Louis grasped each other's hands warmly, and the prince was conducted to the carriage and was driven around the parade ground to Admiral Sands' residence.

The visiting party stayed at the superintendent's residence for about a quarter of an hour and then drove to the government house, where they were received by Governor Edwin Warfield. The prince was met at the front door by the governor and given a hearty reception. After the first official exchanges the visit was comfortably informal. The prince was exceedingly felicitous in the cordial, democratic manner in which he greeted the governor and his staff, and when the governor remarked he would be glad to present his little daughter Emma he was asked to bring her immediately. The prince chatted with little Emma Warfield, who is only six years old.

"I have a little boy just your age," said his highness. "What's his name?" the governor's daughter asked. "He has nine names, one of which is Louis, but we call him Dick." The prince's health was then drunk informally, and he returned to the Drake, where he received the return call of Admiral Evans. Later Admiral Sands, Governor Warfield and the commanding officers of the American ships visited the Drake, and the junior officers from the American ships paid their respects to the British junior officers on each cruiser.

Inmate Prisoner Fought in Court. ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 2.—In a fit of insane anger Joseph W. Gray, on trial in the criminal court for murder, suddenly attacked Chief City Dispensary Physician H. J. Scherck, who was on the witness stand, shook off four deputy sheriffs and then attacked a member of the jury. All this time he kept reviling the court. He was overpowered after having fought all over the courtroom. The jury returned a verdict finding the defendant insane. He was taken to jail and will be sent to an insane asylum.

Grand Rapids Merchant a Suicide. NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—Joseph R. Carpenter, who shot himself in the railway offices of the Rock Island railroad here, was a vice president of the Stieckley Bros. Furniture company of Grand Rapids, Mich., and the traveling representative for the firm. He left there a few days ago for a sixty days' trip through the east. At the office of the firm no possible reason was assigned why he should kill himself. Mr. Carpenter was about fifty years of age and for many years had been a prominent figure in the furniture industry in Grand Rapids and western Michigan.

Miss Maher Won Adding Contest. NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—Miss May Maher of Chicago won the adding machine contest at the National Business show at Madison Square garden last night and broke the world's adding record by getting the total of 500 department store checks in 4 minutes 19 seconds. Miss Mae Barclay of Chicago was second, completing the sum in 4 minutes 21 seconds. Miss Barlay was formerly champion adder of the world and is employed by the Illinois Central in Chicago. Miss Maher is employed in the general offices of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy.

Fire Destroyed Mount Clare Sawmill. BALTIMORE, Nov. 2.—Fire last night totally destroyed the Mount Clare sawmill of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, with contents, consisting of much valuable machinery, with pine, oak and Hickory lumber in process of manufacture. Rough estimates place the damage at $100,000 or more. Eighty-five men are employed in this shop.

Dougherty Still in Jail. PEORIA, Ill., Nov. 2.—Judge Worthington overruled the motion of the attorneys for former Superintendent of Schools N. C. Dougherty to reduce bail to $25,000. The court did reduce the bail, however, by $12,700, leaving the total at $88,300. Dougherty appeared in court for the first time since he was incarcerated on an indictment charging him with looting the school fund of thousands of dollars. He is still in jail for want of a bondsman.

ANGLO-CUBAN TREATY.

Agrarian League of Island Republic Want Britain's Friendship.

HAVANA, Nov. 2.—The Agrarian league has voluntarily given to the committee on foreign relations of the senate and to the newspapers a lengthy statement strongly favoring the ratification of the Anglo-Cuban commercial treaty, disagreeing entirely with the opposition of other business organizations to the treaty and concluding with the statement that the United States has not given any proof officially or otherwise of any hostility toward the treaty.

In view of the latter statement the government will be asked to publish the correspondence between the United States and Cuban governments regarding the treaty.

The report of the league is written by Rafael Fernandez de Castro, a highly prominent and influential sugar planter, who recently declined the secretaryship of agriculture. Some doubts are expressed as to whether the opinion of Senor de Castro, who is the only signer of the report, is shared by the majority of the league, but many prominent members of the organization defer to his judgment.

The report after pointing out that the treaty, being simply one of friendship and navigation, does not threaten Cuba or any nation with whom Cuba maintains cordial relations says: "Perhaps it might be displeasing to some nations that Great Britain is granting a special friendship to this humble nation and that our government is thus strengthening the personality of what is virtually an incipient state by treaties of friendship, commerce and navigation with the great powers, but this contention fails. Just now, when our greatest and best friends declare eloquently that they desire our progress and happiness, it would be ungenerous of them to deny independence of action to this weak republic, which is trying to acquire stability and prosperity. The basis of friendly relations we are able to establish with other nations, because such ties form a protecting shell within which this pearl of the Caribbean can shut itself for the protection of its personality."

MOB TEARS RED FLAG

New York Crowd Resents Outrage on Stars and Stripes.

POLITICAL BANNERS CAUSED RIOT.

Trouble Arose Over Flying of Anarchist Ensign Side by Side With "Old Glory"—Sequel to Lessor Riot at City Hall.

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—Two mobs tore down Tammany banners on which the stars and stripes waved beside the red flag of anarchy. A crowd of more than a thousand pulled down one banner at Fourth street and Broadway, and soon afterward another excited throng hauled down the two emblems at Union square and tore the red flag to pieces.

Mayor McClellan himself, frightened by the effect of these banners on the public, ordered every one of them taken down. Charles F. Murphy, the Tammany leader, said that Tammany had nothing to do with the anarchist banners, and that they had been put up at the order of "business men."

The banner at Fourth street was a duplicate of that which brought on a riot in Printing House square, being a combination of the stars and stripes and the red flag of anarchy held in a hand bearing the name "Hearst." Uniting the two flags was the caption in big black letters, "Under Which Flag?"

As if by common impulse several hundred men gathered where the flag was displayed in Union square. From the midst of the crowd a clear voice cried, "It's a rank outrage against the stars and stripes." A howl greeted this patriotic expression. A young man, hatless and his face flushed with excitement, mounted a hydrant. "I'm not a Hearst man," said he, "but I for one won't stand for such a banner as that. I'll cut it down. We'll get rid of that flag of anarchy."

There was a shout from the crowd, which could be heard for blocks, and a lane through the crowd to the pole was made for the young man, while willing hands boosted him up until he got a firm grasp on the pole, when he climbed up. No policeman was in sight at this time.

The young man, who proved to be Edward Hallett, climbed the pole with the agility of a sailor and, pulling out a jack-knife, hacked at the cord which held the flag suspended until he cut it through and the flag fell to the street.

The action of the crowd in its attitude to the two different flags was noticeable. On the side of the street where the American flag fell there was the utmost reverence. Many uncovered when it fell on them, and many took it down carefully and folded it up without any injury to it.

But to the anarchist flag there were the greatest insults possible. With a shout of glee the crowd grabbed it and dragged it through the street, trampling on it, spitting on it, kicking at it and finally tearing it into small pieces. Hardly a shred of it remained when the crowd finished.
