The body hidden with buckshot.
BRIGHTON, Pa., Nov. 20.—Raphael Maylies, a night-track patrolman, was found dead near the tracks of the New York division of the Pennsylvania railroad at Penn Valley, five miles above here. The body had been riddled with buckshot. Maylies was last seen Saturday night talking to two Italians. He was known to have carried a money belt, and as this is missing the Bucks county coroner believes he was murdered. Maylies had been a track walker only a few weeks, his predecessor also having been found dead on the tracks.

Highland Division Bridge Burned.
NEWTOWN, Conn., Nov. 20.—Fire has destroyed the Highland division bridge of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad over the Housatonic river at this point, and it will be a month before another structure can be built. In the meantime passengers going east and west will be transferred over the highway bridge, fifty feet away. The fire, it is believed, started from a hot cinder dropped by the engine of a freight train.

Weather Probabilities.
Fair; north winds.

CHANNEL DISASTER

Steamer Hilda Foundered on Rocks Off St. Malo.

OVER A HUNDRED SOULS PERISHED

Vessel Left Southampton For French Coast, Missed the Tide Owing to Fog and Sank During the Early Morning.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—A grave disaster overtook the Southwestern railway's cross channel steamer Hilda near St. Malo. The Hilda left Southampton for St. Malo, on the north coast of France, with considerably over a hundred souls on board, the majority of whom were drowned.

Her passage was greatly delayed by a fog in the channel, and when nearing St. Malo she ran into a severe snowstorm, apparently missed her course and foundered on the rocks off Jardin lighthouse, three miles from St. Malo.

The company's steamer Ada, outward bound from St. Malo, rescued five of the passengers and one of the crew. These are now on the way to Southampton and it is believed are the only survivors, though an unconfirmed report reached Paris that seventy had been saved.

The crew numbered twenty six, and there were about a hundred passengers on the ship, the majority being union dealers from St. Brieux and neighborhood.

A telegram from St. Servan, adjoining the town of St. Malo, gives the few details received. The Hilda was near St. Malo when she struck the rocks at 4 o'clock in the morning in the roadstead of the island of Cezembre. She had missed the tide owing to bad weather and fog.

The majority of the crew and passengers were asleep at the time. Two boats were lowered, one of which, containing five men, arrived at St. Servan. The second boat was picked up empty at St. Cast, where thirteen bodies were washed ashore. The top of the Hilda's funnel and her mast are visible at low tide.

The exact number of lives lost on the Hilda is unknown. It is understood that there were about twenty first class passengers, including the Hon. Mrs. Butler, sister of Lord Lansborough, and Colonel Follet. Though it is not certain that these were actually on board, they were expected to travel by the Hilda, and it is known that all the first class passengers were drowned. These passengers were English officers and others who were coming to rejoin their families or to spend the season at St. Malo and Dinard, opposite St. Malo.

It appears to be certain that only six were saved, these being five union workers and an English seaman named Griffin, belonging to Guernsey, and that the total on board, including the crew, numbered 105.

The disaster was first suspected through the washing ashore of a number of bodies, and the port authorities immediately sent out a tug. It was then learned that the Hilda was wrecked on a treacherous reef close to the island of Cezembre called Les Portes. She had apparently struck, broken her back and immediately sank, leaving no time to launch the boats. The Jardin light is quite close to the spot. It cannot yet be explained at what time or how the disaster occurred.

Negro Claims Killing Accidental.
GREAT BARRINGTON, Mass., Nov. 20.—Timothy Jackson, a negro, is locked up at Canaan, Conn., charged with killing Ophelia Penfield, a colored girl, twenty-three years old, of Sheffield, Mass., at his home in Falls Village, a small town fifteen miles from here. Jackson claims that the shooting was the result of an accident. He says that between midnight and 1 a. m. he became involved in a dispute with his wife. The Penfield girl, who was visiting at the Jackson house, was present during the quarrel. Jackson declares that he picked up a gun for the purpose of frightening his wife, but that the weapon was accidentally discharged, the contents lodging in the Penfield girl's back and causing death instantly.

A Bad One.
"How do you suppose Maud Miller liked it when the judge rode off with out making a proposal?" inquired the sappy boarder, who knows his Whittier. "I presume she was a Mad Mallah," cracked the humorous boarder, as he reached across the table for the hash.—Yesterday, Courier-Journal

Isle of Pines Story Denied.
HAVANA, Nov. 20.—The municipal council of the Isle of Pines has issued a lengthy statement denying the charges made by J. H. Keenan of Pittsburg and others that the island is in a condition bordering on anarchy and is without proper courts, schools, facilities for the protection of life and property, etc. The statement claims that these have all been provided and that, although various public improvements are necessary, the government has done more than the small revenues of the island warranted. It alleges that the records show the actual ownership by Americans of lands in the island to be far smaller than has been asserted.

Schumann-Heink's Voice Failed Her.
CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 20.—The season of the "Love's Lottery" company, of which Mme. Schumann-Heink was the star, was closed here, and Mme. Schumann-Heink and her husband left for New York. Mme. Schumann-Heink was unable to sing at the performance, and her physician advised her to refrain from using her voice in opera for the time being because of a cold that she had contracted while in this city.
