MIDDIES' FATAL BOUT

Court Martial on Naval Cadet at Annapolis.

MERIWETHER PLEADED NOT GUILTY

Story Told of Bad Blood Between Prisoner and Midshipman Branch, Who Died From Injuries Received in Flat Fight.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 23.—The court martial trial in the case of Midshipman Meriwether, Jr., on three charges connected with the death of Midshipman James R. Branch, with whom he engaged in a flat fight, has opened here.

The oath was administered by the president of the court, Admiral Ramsay, to Captain Marx as judge advocate, and he administered the oath to the members of the court without further incident. John W. Hulse of Washington was sworn as stenographer. The court and officers being sworn, the charges and specifications were read to Midshipman Meriwether, who pleaded not guilty to the whole and to each charge and specification separately.

The sad incident of the death of young Branch under such circumstances has been widely noticed and has called attention to the existence at the Naval Academy of an unwritten code governing the student body, but quite outside the authoritative regulations and generally in violation of them. Under the "code" every detail of these fights is fixed, the midshipmen on duty abstaining from reporting them and excusing from formation those connected with them. These facts were very clearly brought out by the judge advocate. Meriwether had been generally disliked, one witness said, because he was too "ratty"—that is, it was explained, that he did not abide by the rules laid down for the government of the lower classmen. Some of these were that he should never enter "lovers' lane," an academy walk, that he should turn all corners at right angles, should not look at an upper classman and should answer most respectfully when addressed by one of them; that he must never touch the table nor ask for anything during a meal and under no circumstances "fuss"—that is, to be in the society of young women. These rules and many others are contained in that part of the "code" relating to the government of under classmen. Branch had been one of the midshipmen who, according to the testimony, determined to make life "not worth living" for Meriwether because he would "not abide by these rules, and from that the enmity arose."

The story of the bad blood between the two cadets and of Meriwether's visit to Branch's room, which led to the fatal fight, was told by midshipmen. Midshipman Pritchard, Branch's roommate, testified that Meriwether came to their room when Branch was in bed and called the latter a "d-n-lar," a "d-n sneak" and other opprobrious epithets.

Midshipman Yeager, who accompanied Meriwether on that occasion, testified that Branch called Meriwether a "d-n fool." Another witness said that Meriwether had said he hated Branch and intended to force him to fight.

Branch's roommate testified that Branch had said he did not report Meriwether for the alleged breach of rules. A notable incident was the objection made by counsel for the defense to Commander Sidney A. Staunton as a member of the court on the ground that he had expressed the opinion that Meriwether should be dismissed from the academy. The court sustained the objection of counsel.

The first witnesses called were Midshipmen James P. Van de Carr and Earl V. Pritchard, classmates of Branch, and their evidence bore directly on the second charge, that of quarreling with a person in the naval service, with an indirect relation to the main charge of manslaughter.

Ralph Yeager, a classmate of Meriwether and who went to the room with him on the night of the quarrel, testified that Branch had called Meriwether a "d-n fool" when he came to the room and said that he was "ratty." Midshipman Harold V. McKittrick, who acted as a second for Branch during the fight, told of the arrangements for it and the insistence of both parties that the fight should be to a finish.

The fight itself, he testified, lasted over twenty-two rounds of two minutes each, with one minute intermission. Early in the fight one of Branch's eyes was closed, but he was holding his own.

At the end of the twentieth round Meriwether fouled by hitting in a clinch and offered to forfeit the fight. This Branch and his seconds would not allow, insisting on a finish.

This is regarded as a strong point for Meriwether, showing that he wished the fight to stop.

Midshipman A. W. Filch, who refereed the fight which was followed by Branch's death, stated that he had officiated in nineteen such contests, and Midshipman McKittrick testified that he had taken part in nine.

President Sold His Dakota Ranch. DICKINSON, N. D., Nov. 23.—It is announced that the Maltice Cross ranch, owned and occupied by President Roosevelt during his residence in North Dakota, has been purchased by O. J. Delandredre of Fargo for $15,000.

KRUP'S NAME "GRASSY" HALPIN.

Bondsman Who Lost $5,000 Forfeited His Stand.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—John F. Pickett, who furnished $5,000 in cash that enabled Krup, the floater indicted for election frauds to escape from the law, swore before the grand jury that the money was his own and that he had not received any part of it from any other person. He was properly indignant about what he termed was the ingratitude of Krup, whose real name turns out to be James Halpin, and pledged himself to aid the attorney general in endeavoring to catch the fugitive.

While Pickett did not say directly that the missing floater is related to him, Attorney General Mayer gathered that inference from his testimony. Pickett was ordered to appear before the grand jury again next Monday. John J. Murphy, brother of the leader of Tammany Hall, and Alderman James Gaffney, who had been summoned to testify in the Krup matter, were excused until Monday.

Pickett, after he was excused from the grand jury room, talked freely about his connection with the case. He is short, stout, well dressed, wears a heavy black mustache and could pose for a composite picture of the Lighor Dealers' association.

"Krup's real name," asserted Pickett, "is Halpin. I have known him for fifteen years. He didn't live in the Eighteenth district, but always worked around the district on election and primary days. Those who knew him well called him 'Grassy.'"

"If I can't catch him, I'm out $5,000, and that is all there is to it. While I am no pauper and have accumulated money in twenty-five years of the liquor business, I don't feel like losing $5,000 for a man like Halpin, and I'll bend every energy to have him brought back."

It is said that the attorney general expects to have Krup, alias Halpin, in custody within a couple of days.

SHOT BOTH BROTHERS.

W. H. Jones, Infatuated With Young Girl, Commits Murder at Nyack.

NYACK, N. Y., Nov. 23.—Because they objected to his attentions to their sister W. H. Jones last night shot and instantly killed Harry Britton, aged eighteen years, and probably fatally wounded Britton's brother, Frank.

Jones, who is about thirty-five years old, is said to have been infatuated with the Britton boys' pretty sister, Jessie, who is only sixteen years old and has just recently left school. The girl was annoyed by Jones' persistence, and at her request her brothers ordered him to keep away from the home. Last night he presented himself at the door and demanded to be allowed to see Jessie. When Jones suddenly drew a revolver and shot Harry dead and then shot Frank twice, inflicting wounds from which he probably will die. He then fled and disappeared in the darkness.

Hundreds of citizens have started out to scour the country in search of the murderer, who is believed to be hiding in the hills.

The reply of the porte, which was handed Baron von Callee, the Austro-Hungarian ambassador, last night, rejects the proposals of the powers on all points and declares that the public opinion of Turkey would not countenance their acceptance.

TARBELL'S SCHEME.

Equitable Vice President Got Profit on His Own Risks.

MUTUAL RESERVE TO COME NEXT.

Witness Had Declared Against Any System of Rebates as Worst Evil of Life Insurance—Free Trips in Private Cars.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—Gage E. Tarbell, second vice president of the Equitable, whose testimony before the Armstrong committee occupied a great part of the session, admitted that he received commissions on all his personal policies and those of his family, which amount to $500,000 in the Equitable. He also received commissions from the New York Life and other companies. Previously Mr. Tarbell had declared that the practice of giving back part of a premium to a policy holder—the rebate system—was the worst evil in present day life insurance. A part of this insurance on his own life on which he receives commission has been taken out since Mr. Tarbell became an officer.

The witness himself opened the door for Mr. Hughes' questioning by his casual illustrative remark that he was very well satisfied with the profits on his personal policy. This suggestion Mr. Hughes, who was working on another line, followed up with his usual persistence. Before he gets through the officers of other companies will have a chance to tell whether or not they get commissions from the policies on their own lives.

Mr. Tarbell also told of trips which he and his family have made in private cars. There was no expense involved, for the Equitable either owned or borrowed the cars and the roads kindly allowed free transportation. Mr. Tarbell thought this was in return for the services which the Equitable rendered in holding railroad bonds.

Mr. Tarbell declared he believed, "generally speaking," that all officers of life insurance companies took commissions and renewals on insurance on their own lives.

Mr. Tarbell's confession came in connection with a $15,000 policy which he took out twenty years ago, maturing this month. Mr. Hughes followed up the lead instantly.

Q. How much insurance do you carry? A. About $500,000 on my own life and the lives of members of my family.

Q. Since you have been an officer of the Equitable Life how much of that insurance have you taken out? A. Two policies of $100,000 each.

Q. Of course, you pay premiums on these? You deal directly with the company? A. No; I placed the insurance through a general agent, who allowed me a commission.

Q. How much of a commission? A. A general agent's commission of 50 per cent and 7 1/2 per cent on renewals.

Q. Then you got all that the general agent would get? A. Yes.

The Mutual Reserve Life Insurance company, it is said, will be the next subject of inquiry. Mr. Hughes and the committee have already done a good deal of work in preparing for the examination of this company.

The principal witness against the accused woman is her husband, Isaac C. Barnes.

Finally, however, their resentment became so strong that a few days ago during the absence of the foreman a number of the employees declared they would no longer use it, and to further show their disgust they stood off a distance and pelted it with chunks of iron. A few volleys of the heavy pieces of iron against the clock literally broke it to pieces.

Extensive Lockout at St. Petersburg. Violence, Pillage and Threats by Peasantry of Subzha, Jurieff and Alexandrovsk.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 23.—The emperor presided at the first full meeting of Witte's cabinet at Tansko-Selo and signed two decrees converting the promises of the press, made in the manifesto of Oct. 30, into definite administrative orders.

A dispatch here says it is rumored that 12,000 Don Cossacks are marching on St. Petersburg to liberate the czar, whom they believe to have been captured by the Jews.

An extensive lockout has been declared in the engineering and metal industries of the capital, consequent on the admiralty's closing the Neva works. The Nevski shipyard, which employs 7,000 men, is closed. Crichton's shipyard and the Westinghouse works are also reported to be about to close.

The agrarian disorders in the district of Subzha have assumed such violence that the troops are unable to cope with them. The whole northern half of the district is in the hands of peasant rioters, who are pillaging the estates and burning the harvested crops. During the pillaging of one estate a company of Cossacks looked on, being unable to interfere.

In the Jurieff and Alexandrovsk districts of the Vladimir government peasant mobs are demanding the surrender of the stocks of provisions and are threatening to set the torch to all buildings and crops in the whole locality and to storm the county treasury.

Dispatches from southwestern Russia indicate that the Zionist movement has been given a powerful impetus by the anti-Jewish disorders. Hundreds of Jewish families are leaving or preparing to leave for Palestine. Three hundred have sailed from Odessa on one steamer.

The libretto is by Mosenthal, and the 1,200 costumes were prepared in Vienna. Last night Edyth Walker played the title role and Marie Rappold, a Brooklyn girl and new to the operatic stage, was the Sulamith. Miss Rappold won the applause and sympathy of the big audience.
