FOR SUNDAY READING

"BE THOU STRONG."
(J. Kings 2:2)

The battle rages; terror is over the world. Some one must sink and perish, some one to-day must yield. The resolute and wary whose weapons forward press. May in a moment shudder in utter helplessness.

O, "Be Thou strong," my brother! This day forget thou not That glory lingers over The field with danger fraught. Strong in the God of battles, For right take firm thy stand, And "Be thou strong," to conquer With courage, O, how grand!

—B. F. M. Souza, in United Presbyterian.

THREE CORDS OF LOVE.

This Greatest of Things Manifests Itself Through the Heart and Soul and Mind.

There are three kinds of love—passions, rather, I should say, three instruments on which love plays. It may manifest itself through the heart, through the soul, or through the mind. My love for you may be either practical, admiring or communing. The love of the heart is practical; it ministers in common things. The love of the soul is admiration; it looks upon a far-off glory and longs to be near it. The love of the mind is communion; it has touched a point of equality with its object; it can listen and respond. A mother's love for her child is that of the heart; it is helpful. A poet's love for nature is that of the soul; it is wondering, admiring. A friend's love for a friend is that of the mind; it is intellectual sympathy—communion. I think our love for God plays successively each of these tunes. We begin with the heart; we say "Our Father;" we try to work for our Father. By and by the vision of wonder breaks upon us—the love of the soul; we bow with admiration before the mysteries of the universe. At last comes the glad morning—the love of the mind; we begin to know God, to commune with Him, to speak with Him face to face as a man speaketh with his friend; that is the manhood of our love.—George Matheson, in The Watchman.

HANDS TIED WITH LILIES.

How the Most Attractive and Fragrant Things in Life May Become a Snare.

A young man lost his life on one of the lakes in eastern Pennsylvania recently in a very strange way. He had taken several persons out on the lake to gather lilies. In reaching for the flowers the nurse of the family, who was one of the party, upset the boat and all were precipitated into the water. The young man was an expert swimmer and attempted to save the nurse and baby, but became enmeshed in the lilies and sank. When his body was recovered his hands were found bound together by lily stems.

So even the charming lily, the purest of flowers, the emblem of virtue, may become an instrument of death. So says the New York Observer in commenting on this, there are many pleasures in life, in themselves as pure and attractive as the lily, but indulged in to excess they entwine themselves about the soul and drown it in worldly lilies. Blessings are good, but God may give so many of them that a soul might be destroyed by them. As an abundance of lilies may tie the hands of a swimmer that he perish by them so indeed the pleasures of life may bind the soul that it sink into perdition by them.

RAM'S HORN PUNGENCIES.

Limitations lead to liberty. Love calls no service degrading. Deeds are the only dependable creeds. Fetters of silk may bind as fast as cotton. Blindness banishes some of our best blessings. Sin's foothold depends on our affinity for it. Many a problem comes as a test of our prayers. Christ cannot get in where charity cannot get out. It is easier to analyze one another's burdens than to bear them. The steps are few from dalliance with sin to defiance of God. It is better to seem green to men than not to be fruitful to God. The more of man gets into religion the more religion will get into men. The mightiest force for good is faith in the goodness of the Almighty. God does not ask about man's attitude toward Him; He wants his relationship. Many a man who would make a first rate candle is making a grand fizzle as an arc-light. The love of God is the only thing that will make you love all kinds of people all the time. It is no use praying for the salvation of your grocer when he is sitting up nights thinking about your old bills.

As We Give.

A little fellow, who had noticed that his mother put only five cents into the contribution box on Sunday, said to her on the way home, as she was finding fault with the sermon: "Why, mamma, what could you expect for a nickel?" There was sound philosophy in the criticism.

The Early Boom.

"When I was a boy," said the rather vain person, "everybody said I was going to be president of the United States." "Yes," answered the seasoned politician. "You can simply illustrate my argument that it isn't safe to start a boom too far ahead of election."—Washington Star.

WIFE AND MUSICIAN.

Prof. Claude Halstead von Tyme, author of "The American Revolution," is a noted athlete as well as an eminent scholar.

Sir Edward Elgar, the distinguished composer, was at one time, like the immortal Wagner, glad to earn a few shillings by putting together quadrilles from operas and popular airs.

Information from Calcutta is to the effect that Kipling did not write stories about India. "Save as an official unit in the British empire, there is no such place as India," Mr. Kipling's theme was the corner of the Punjab, which he knows.

In 1862 the German novelist William Raabe wrote a story in which one of the characters remarked that the time would come when there would be an "England of the Pacific ocean," which would then be very animated. "We call it to-day Japan and stand before it as before a dark riddle."

Senator John W. Daniel of Virginia is working steadily on the writing of the memoirs of Gen. Jubal A. Early, the distinguished confederate leader. The senator has but recently returned to his home in Washington from an extended trip in search of material for notes and additions to the book.

The late Julius Stinde, one of the greatest wits in recent years in the German book world, went to Berlin in 1876 and for some time no attention was paid him. He brought out "Buchholzens" in Italian, and all Germany laughed with him, and tens of thousands of copies were sold.

Senator Tulio Massarini died recently in Milan at the age of 78. He was extremely wealthy and noted for his charitable bequests. He had a reputation as a painter and writer on literary subjects, and through his work the German poet Heine exercised considerable influence in Italian belles lettres.

Some of the world's greatest singers have been discovered accidentally. Once upon a time Wachtel, the great tenor of his day in Germany, was cracking his whip and hailing fares in a musical rondo. Mme. Scaldi, the greatest of contraltos, is said to have called her wares in the street before she was found for the opera stage. Campanini, the king of tenors, was a blacksmith, but was heard singing like an angel and was enabled to desert the forge for the footlights.

LITTLE GIRL HAS WILD RIDE ON ENGINE PILOT.

Jumps in Front of Train to Save Pet Dog and Is Carried Three Miles by Locomotive.

Chicago.—Nine-year-old Anna Lutz of Evanston, was carried three miles on the pilot of a locomotive early the other evening, after leaping in front of the train in an attempt to save her small collie dog Governor, which she carried through her dangerous ride. Neither the girl nor the dog was injured.

The little girl was returning to her parents' home and was crossing the railway tracks. Governor was following closely at her heels, but stopped on the north-bound track in the path of the engine, which was moving slowly out of the yards. Anna turned and called to the dog, but it did not hear, and in an instant more would have been crushed under the engine had not the girl leaped in the path of the train and seized her pet by the collar, to be herself struck by the train and gathered up by the pilot.

The girl had approached the tracks from the left side, and the engineer, holding the dog closely she clung to the rocking engine, gazing from the right, did not see her. She fell squarely on the top of the pilot, still clinging to the dog's collar with one hand and gripping one of the traces of the "cow catcher" with the other.

The engine increased its speed, lurching clumsily over the rails, and Anna had more and more difficulty in keeping her position. Still she clung to her pet. Every throb of the giant cylinders behind her made her grip on the iron more uncertain.

The headlight threw a pencil of rays across a sharp curve, swung through a wide arc, and revealed the oncoming Milwaukee flyer on the south bound track. There was a rift in the darkness and a flash and a roar, which, as she said later, almost caused the frightened child to release her hold on the iron, to which she clung. Along a down grade north of Wilmette, the engine leaped forward with redoubled speed and the child was thrown one side to another, by the rocking of the locomotive.

Rescue came with the stopping of the train south of Winnetka to allow a passenger to pass. The girl was still clinging convulsively to the iron brace and in her half-dazed condition did not yet realize that the engine had stopped when she was found by Fireman Frank Schultz. She quickly was revived and told her story to the trainmen, who gathered around her and who sent her home.

BURGLAR IN EVENING DRESS

Caught in Act, He Restores Loot with a Bow and Makes His Departure.

Philadelphia.—It was really so like a fiction story that Mrs. Florence Kroneman forgot to faint as she came upon a burglar, clad in full evening dress, in her dining-room at three o'clock the other morning.

"What are you doing here, Kroneman?" Before she could finish the question, the burglar turned, bowed with the grace of a dancing master, and said:

"Ah, I see; you have caught me. Very well, I regret having frightened you.

"Although I am a burglar, madam, I trust that I still retain some vestiges of gentlemanliness. To prove it, I give you back this (waving his hand toward a large pile of solid silver which was gathered together in a heap on the table) and these."

So saying, the man produced a handful of rings, brooches, pins and other trinkets belonging to Mrs. Kroneman, tossed them on a chair and fled into the night.

"Good evening," he said, as he vanished.

Then Mrs. Kroneman fainted.

As soon as she regained possession of her senses she called a policeman and told him of the Chesternfield burglar. Mrs. Kroneman lives in a stately old residence surrounded by extensive wooded grounds.

Kissed Her Too Often.

Jersey City, N. J.—Because she had been kissed too often Mary Chaslinsky, of Secaucus, N. J., summoned before a police justice Walter Borouhasky, charging him with assault and battery.

"Why he would kiss me as often as 100 times a day, and his rough beard would make my lips sore," she said.

"My dinners were often delayed and the cooking would be spoiled by him annoying me while I was in the kitchen." The lawyer representing Borouhasky said his client was insanely in love with the girl and could not see any harm in kissing her.

Why He Loved Her.

"Darling," said she, "do you love me as much as ever?"

"Yes, dearie," said he, with his nose buried in his newspaper.

That ought to have satisfied her, but she had to ask: "Why?"

"Oh, I dunno. Habit, I suppose."—Star Stories.
