CONVICT DESTROYS HIS OWN EYESIGHT

FORMER OFFICE MAN REBELS AT HARD LABOR.

DASHES DRUG INTO OPTICS

Prisoner Uses Terrible Means to Escape Service—Warden About to Promote Him—Sent to Prison for Embezzlement.

Huntsville, Tex.—"I'll bet my sight that I won't be doing this kind of work much longer," whispered No. 1,186 in the Huntsville penitentiary to a fellow convict. No. 1,186 is K. R. Smith, and he is now in the penitentiary hospital totally blind.

He put some powerful drug in his eyes in order that he might render himself unable to perform the back-breaking labor imposed upon him and, either by design or accident, he made the dose so strong that the optic nerves were paralyzed.

Smith is serving two years. He was convicted last August of a $600 shortage while he was cashier and confidential man in the employ of an electric light company of El Paso.

The evidence brought out at the trial indicated that Smith had taken the money, not for himself, but for the benefit of friends who, from time to time, besieged him for loans. He lacked the courage to say no. It was clearly established that various personal loans made by Smith around El Paso more than aggregated the total of his alleged peculations. At one time he had a fortune of his own and he gave it away.

Smith seemed to have a mania for helping others.

On Christmas it was his habit to send wagons loaded with provisions into the poorer districts, and many a starving family has been helped by him without ever knowing the source of their manna.

Children of El Paso followed Smith about the streets and looked upon him as their Santa Claus, for he never failed to open his purse and gratify whatever childish whim they might express within his hearing. If there was a church debt to be lifted Smith was always one of the first to contribute.

Stranded travelers and consumptives roaming the southwest, only to die by slow stages, were special objects of sympathy in the eyes of the big hearted Smith.

The electric light company of El Paso is a rich corporation, and Smith reasoned that it would, after all, not be wrong for him to divert some of the earnings of the corporation to benevolent purposes.

But electric light companies in El Paso, as well as elsewhere, hold opposite views to Smith, consequently the philanthropic purposes to which the defaulting cashier applied his irregularly-gotten funds was not even a mitigating circumstance in the eyes of the prosecution.

Smith was what the world calls a "good fellow"—that is, the world says "good fellow" so long as the good fellow's money lasts and he doesn't get into trouble.

So Smith went to the penitentiary, where, in accordance with the usual rule, he was set at hard labor. He had been an office man since he struck out in the world to make his own way. His hands were as soft as a woman's. He felt that he could not stand the hard labor.

The glare of the semitropical sun beat down upon his head and his heated brain evolved the idea that blindness would be preferable to such drudgery.

Then by some means Smith obtained some kind of drug with which to ruin his eyes.

If the unhappy Smith had only known, the warden of the penitentiary never had intended to keep him permanently at hard labor. The prison management was in need of an accountant and it had been decided from the beginning to give the place to Smith.

For reasons of discipline, soft snaps are never given to any convict when he first enters. He is immediately set to extremely hard labor and is led to suppose that he is to remain there. Then, according to the prison theory, when promotion does come, it is doubly appreciated.

Had Smith stayed the hand that dashed the poison in his eyes just one week he would have been sitting at a desk in the warden's office intrusted with his habitual line of work.

The Pope's School Days. At the recent athletic tournament in the vatican the pope took special interest in the bicycle contests and remarked that if the bicycle had existed when he was a boy it would have saved him great hardship, as he had every day to walk seven miles in all weather to school.

ASTOUNDING REVELATION CLOTHING MANUFACTURERS SEEK RELIEF

Loaded to the Gunwales with Millions of Dollars Worth of High Grade Men's, Boys' and Youths' Clothing that Failed to Sell Because of the Warm Weather in the Early Fall, They Have Asked the Retailers to Come to their Aid.

Murphy & Blish

The well known American Clothiers and Gent's Furnishers of Sayre have been among the first of the retailers to respond to the call and have secured an entire new line of winter Clothing, Underwear and Gents' Furnishings that will be placed on sale at their Lockhart street store, next the postoffice, and the cut in the prices has been made so deep that there is not a man, young or old, in this section that can afford to pass them by. The reason for this astonishing cut is plain. Manufacturers expected a big fall trade. The big concerns ran their factories night and day during the summer months anticipating the biggest business in the history of the clothing industry. They were grievously disappointed. Mild October and November weather was responsible for a big slump in manufacturer's sales and now at the very outset of winter they find their warerooms crowded with goods that must be disposed of at any price. Naturally they look to the retailers for relief, and the latter have promised to do their best.

The manufacturers need the money that is invested in their enormous output of Clothing and they are sending it to the retailers with instructions to cut the price to the core. The consumer is the only one who will profit by this transaction. Legitimate cut price sales just previous to the holiday season is a hitherto unheard of proposition and an innovation in the business world, but the step is justified by the conditions and if you fail to take advantage of the opportunity to secure high grade clothing at almost your own figures, you only are the loser.

The stock which will be placed on sale is positively the largest and finest ever displayed in a Clothing store in this valley.

It would require a sheet many times the size of this to list the clothing bargains which will be offered at this sale, therefore you will have to be content with a few, and witness with your own eyes the thousands of others when you visit the store. Here are a limited number of low priced offerings that will prevail during this money saving event.
