CITY JAILS AND LIBRARIES.

Differences Invested in Each by Some of the Larger Municipalities.

If reading is a preventive of criminality, as some persons declare, some American cities are slow about putting this remedy for crime into effective operation, says the New York Sun. New York city, for instance, has $5,500,000 invested in jails and correctional institutions, and less than $6,000,000 in libraries.

Philadelphia has $2,150,000 in jails to $360,000 in libraries. Cleveland has $250,000 in jails and $325,000 in libraries. These are the notable exceptions: Boston has $2,600,000 invested in jails, and $1,200,000 in libraries. Chicago has $1,900,000 in jails and $2,500,000 in libraries. St. Louis has an almost equal amount, $550,000 invested in each.

Pittsburg and Milwaukee have more than a million each in libraries, and Pittsburgh stands fourth in this particular, exceeded only by Boston, Chicago and New York. Allegheny City, which is geographically a part of Pittsburgh, has $730,000 invested in libraries, and Newark has $515,000. Baltimore and New Orleans have only a small investment in library buildings. San Francisco has $275,000, and Omaha, a much smaller city, $115,000.

NERVE OF THE "SOONERS"

Methods Taken by the Adventurers Who Try to Beat to the Front.

For many persons, a newly discovered fact is simply a spring-board from which they dive into a bottomless sea of speculation, says Samuel McChord Crothers, in Atlantic. They pride themselves on their ability to jump at conclusions, forgetting that jumping is an exercise in which the lower orders excel their betters. If an elephant could jump as far in proportion to his weight, as a flea there would be no holding him on this planet. Every new discovery is followed by a dozen extravaganzas, engineered by the Get-wise-quick people. There is always some Young Napoleon of Philosophy who undertakes to corner truth-market. It's like what happened at the opening of Oklahoma territory. Before the day set by the government when they all were to start fair in their race for farms, a band of adventurers called "Sooners" smuggled themselves across the line. When the bona fide settler arrived on his quarter-section, he found an impudent "Sooner" in possession. You can't find any fresh field of investigation that isn't claimed by these sooners. It all comes because people are no longer educated logically.

SLOW CURE FOR INSOMNIA

The Victim Took Beer for It, But in Extremely Moderate Quantity.

"Speaking of homeopathy," said the doctor, according to the Philadelphia Record, "reminds me of the case of Miss N—, who traces her ancestry back through a long line of Puritans, and has imbibed from them strong and unyielding principles as regards saloons and liquor. Miss N— has been troubled with insomnia, and has tried all sorts of remedies. Finally, she told me of her trouble. I suggested that beer might help her to sleep. She was horrified, but at last a better peddler stopped at her door and left a dozen bottles.

"The beer man returned in about three days for the empty bottles.

"My dear man," said Miss N—, "the bottles are not yet empty."

"The beer man waited several days more and again appeared.

"Your bottles are perfectly safe," Miss N— told him, and then a thought struck her, "but if you need them I have one nearly empty which you may have."

"I guess you don't drink it very fast," suggested the man.

"Why," replied Miss N—, "I take two teaspoons twice a day."

SCOURGE OF STOCKMEN.

Ravages of the Big Gray Wolf Far Worse Than Those of the Coyote.

Big wolves are found in both Texas and Oklahoma, but they are rare compared to the coyotes, and they are great wanderers, says Theodore Roosevelt, in Scribner's. Alone or in parties of three or four or half a dozen they travel to and fro across the country often leaving a district at once if they are molested. Coyotes are more or less plentiful everywhere throughout the west in thinly settled districts and they often hang about in the immediate neighborhood of towns. They do enough damage to make farmers and ranchers kill them whenever the chance offers.

But this damage is not appreciable when compared with the ravages of their grim, big brother, the gray wolf, which, wherever it exists in numbers is a veritable scourge to the stock men.

A Little More Credible.

A man who had been shooting on Cape Cod returned by train and a stranger who was obliged to share his seat entered into conversation with him, and asked if he had had good sport.

"Very good indeed," replied the sportsman. "We got 100 head to two guns."

"You don't say so?" ejaculated the stranger, apparently lost in astonishment at the size of the bag. "Double-barreled guns, I suppose?"—Youth's Companion.

Value of the Herring.
The herring is more largely used as an article of food than any other fish, both in its fresh and cured states. More than 250,000 tons of herrings are landed on the coasts of Great Britain every year, representing a money value of about $6,000,000.

MINER ATTACKED
BY THREE BEARS

DESPERATE BATTLE IN CALIFORNIA GOLD COUNTRY.

MAN ESCAPES WITH HIS LIFE

Is Badly Wounded, But Slays One of the Big Grizzlies—Found by a Companion and Nursed Back to Health.

Boston—Charles Chubbuck, of Scituate, Mass., an old California miner, the only man living who, attacked by three grizzly bears, fought them single handed, killing one, and escaping with his life.

Becoming reminiscent the other day he told the story of his escape to a reporter.

"In the autumn of 1857," he said, "a lot of us gold miners were encamped near French gulch not far from the foot of Scott mountain in northern California. One Sunday, while out hunting, we climbed the mountain by following the rocky bed of a gulch till we reached Table Rock, a ledge on rock, flat as a mortar board, that caps the mountain and is covered with stunted trees, bushes and briars. I had separated from my companions and gone a third of a mile, keeping close to the overhanging rock on my left, watching for game down the mountain when a partridge whirled past and disappeared.

"I looked up, hearing a slight rustling of leaves and saw a big grizzly standing on a rock 12 feet above me. Instinctively I jumped back, cringing. He leaped and swept my rifle out of my reach. Realizing that in another second the brute would be upon me, I whirled about and made tracks for the gulch, with the bear a few feet behind. "As bears are unable to run fast down hill I had gained on him about 20 feet, when, issuing from the gulch immediately in front of me, came two other grizzlies. One struck me a tremendous blow, which dislocated my hip and hurled me down the mountain side. I knew now flight was impossible, so I straightened myself out, face down in the leaves, playing 'dead man'.

"I lay absolutely still for a minute until when I felt on my head the hot breath of one of the bears, and the sensation of his jaws slipping down on either side of my neck came together with a crunch. He dragged me for several feet, then he rooted me in the side and licked the blood that trickled down my face. Finally getting on top of me and pressing down his entire weight till I heard my ribs snap, I felt my breath stop and the blood ooze from my ears and nose.

"I had given up all hope for all life was leaving my body, when the three bears began to quarrel among themselves, and I managed to roll over and draw my bowie knife from its sheath. They had noticed my movements and instantly ceased fighting. The big fellow then came to me and stood over me, and, exerting all my remaining strength, I plunged the blade clear up to the hilt between the creature's forelegs. He gave an unearthly squeal, raised himself on his hind legs, lifting me with him, and for a moment we were face to face.

"Then I felt his claws as they tore off some of my face and a second later a bear in the rear scalped me and I lost consciousness. Whether the bears were attracted by some object, or went to fighting among themselves, I cannot say, but when I revived it was dark and I was alone.

"I tried to move, but the action caused me so much pain that I cried aloud in my agony.

"A hunting companion of mine heard my voice, and following it, stumbled over me. I was deprived of speech and so mutilated that he did not recognize me, but picked me up and carried me down the mountain, back to the camp, where, after eight months of suffering, I was at last able to sit up, but it was a full year before I could walk."

Naps on High Window Sill.

New York—Morris Spencer, weary of window cleaning, calmly sat down and fell asleep on the narrow ledge of the twelfth story of a Wall street skyscraper. For three hours he slept on his narrow bed, unconscious of the peril, and 135 feet above the street. Then a policeman, summoned by a horror-stricken crowd below, gently roused the window and, first getting a firm grasp on the sleeping man's arm, awoke him. He seemed indignant at the policeman's disturbing his nap. He resumed his window cleaning.

Oyster Divers.

Oysters are obtained in many ways. At Minorca the fishermen simply dives to a depth of 70 feet, with a weight in one hand to carry him down. With the other hand he picks up as many oysters as he can carry, and brings them to the surface.

STAY-STORYTELLER.

A certain gentleman on being asked to subscribe toward sending out a missionary to one of the cannibal islands of the Pacific, is reported to have answered, in the most discouraging manner, "Certainly not, I am a vegetarian."

A cartoonist in Manila was presented to genial Secretary Taft. "And so you are the man," exclaimed the secretary, "that has been taking liberties with my face!" "Golly," pleaded the caricaturist, "but remember that your face is my fortune."

A story is told of a dying rabbit, who had been all his lifetime extremely religious, but had likewise always suffered much want and misery. "Do you know," he said to those in the sick room, "if, after all the sad experiences I have had in the past, there is no future life, I shall be greatly amused."

"I know a woman," says Belva A. Lockwood, "who got a modern servant, a cook, from a noted cooking school. On the third day she announced that he was going to leave. 'You only keep two servants,' she said to her mistress, 'and I've been accustomed to living where there are four, which suits me better on account of my partiality for bridge.'"

A red-headed man one night raked up enough courage to propose to a girl with whom he was very deeply and sincerely in love. She replied to his suit in a sad voice: "I'm very sorry, George, but I could never marry anyone with red hair." "I'm very sorry," said her suitor, "my barber tells me that at the rate my hair is falling out I'll be completely bald in two years."

THE WORLD OVER.

The attempt to acclimatize in England the famous blue poppy of Tibet has proved a failure.

Canada has enacted a law providing for the payment of a salary to the leader of the opposition in parliament.

Certain banknotes that circulate in Austria-Hungary are ornamented with the portrait of a favorite prima donna.

An advertisement from the York-shire Post: "Would any lady of means care to marry poor, crowded-out clerk, age 37?"

Under the auspices of the University of Fribourg, Switzerland, a business academy for women only has been opened in that city.

The Alsatian city of Mulhausen not only provides free baths for its school children, but free medical inspection and dental treatment.

English poachers have adopted khaki for wear during business hours. They find it makes the evasion of watchful gamekeepers easier.

The town of Lucerne has bought for $200 Schaffhausen's old guillotine, and announces that it will lend it to other towns at $5.50 an execution.

During the last 11 months Oxford, England, has lost by death its mayor, three aldermen and four town councillors, which is considered "a municipal record."

For the exclusive purpose of looking after motorists and motor cars, a corps of 250 policemen is being raised in Paris, who will be required to pass the official examination for motorists' certificates.

With the permission of the Russian government an Italian company is trying to raise a British war vessel which sank in Balaklava bay, Crimea, during the war of 1854-56. The wreck is believed to contain a large sum of gold.

TERSE TRUTHS.

Only those who have suffered can truly sympathize.

A friend in need is a friend in deed, not alone in words.

Some men who are quick to propose reforms are the last to accept them.

It is better to be known as a good man than to be known as a good fellow.

Some men think they are popular merely because people impose on them.

The world has very little confidence in a man who is too proud to remember his origin.

Some men would never know they had a good time yesterday if they had no headache to-day.

Instead of complaining that they do not get what they deserve, most men should be rejoicing because of it.

If the possession of money were the only reason for happiness, the world would lose most of its cheerfulness.

A mother is always ready to trust her daughter's happiness to a young man who is courteous and polite to his sisters.

SO IT IS SAID.

A shoemaker is the whole-saler man and generally well heeled.

A baker can always raise the dough. A butcher can usually contrive to make both ends meet.

A hatter is sure to be a block ahead of all other men.

A huckster has no trouble with the police in making a good living out of green goods.

A baby carriage manufacturer never fails to push his business.

A hairdresser, as a rule, does a thriving business in combination locks. A newspaper man rarely fails to get his paper on the street.

An electrician is always posted on current topics.

Truth Comes Out.

Mamma—Of course you said, "Oh, this is so sudden!" when Tom finally proposed.

Daughter—No; I fully intended to, but I was so excited I forgot and exclaimed, "At last!"—Chicago Daily News.

Tending to Business.

During the hearing of a charge of house-breaking against a number of youths in Edinburgh, it was stated that each member of the gang had promised the leader not to touch intoxicating liquors during "business hours."

To Win Truth.

If you wish for truth, you must give freedom; there must be neither exacting nor tyranny. It is human to desire liberty, and the yoked human creature does not express his genuine opinions.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Action of Gravity.

"Senator, how did you get your start in life?" asked the reporter. "I was born on a hillside farm in Vermont," said the eminent statesman, "and at an early age I rolled down."—Chicago Tribune.

Birds at Home.

More than 10,000 photographs of birds amid their natural surroundings have been taken by an English naturalist. Some of them entitled as much as a week of waiting and watching.

The Right Place.

If ever we have to board again we are going to look for a place in a home where the housewife feels complimented if you eat until your collar hurts.—Chicago Sun.

Woman's Hair.

Few ladies are aware that they carry some 40 or 50 miles of hair on their heads. The fair-haired may even have to dress 70 miles of threads of gold every morning.

In Other Words.

Her—I wonder why Solomon never referred to any of his wives? Him—He did. He said "Vanity of vanities; all is vanity."—Chicago Daily News.

Keep Shoes Bright.

In Paris even the poor man stops on his way to work to have his shoes shined. It costs him only two cents, and he might lose his job if he did not.

Helping the Fallen.

Every man you help out of the gutter is one man less left there to pull you down.—The Commonwealth.
