At about nine o'clock this morning Floyd Campbell was driving a team across the railroad crossing and another team attached to a democrat wagon and driven by Adam Tompkins was following behind his wagon. Mr. Campbell got across the tracks all right but the team driven by Tompkins got frightened at the noise of the hammering in the Bridge Works and made a sudden jump which broke the cockeye in one of the traces. There were four freight trains coming from different directions and one engine was nearly upon the wagon when Mr. Campbell came to the rescue and grabbed the trace and whiffletree and snaked the wagon across the tracks to a place of safety. There were several persons looking on expecting to see the wagon dashed to pieces but Mr. Campbell's prompt action saved the wagon from being wrecked and prevented a serious accident.
