According to advices received from St. Petersburg last night, the "rebel-Hon" at Moscow is entering on its final stage.

The disarmament of the proistariat is being carried out systematically at St. Petersburg. A large force of Coseacks and infantry have occupied the workmen's quarters across the Neva. Troops surrounded each block of tenements, and gendarmes entered the houses and ransacked every room. They found hundreds of revolvers and a few rifles. One house had a new machine gun and plenty of ammunition for it.
