tive Regarding Santo Domingo. Moroccan Conference and Scope of Monroe Doctrine.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.-The Democratic minority of the senate has been upset by the action of Senator Patterson (Colo.), who made a speech on the Santo Domiago question, in which he warmly defended President Roosevelt's policy. He also referred in terms of praise to the president's participation policy regarding railroad legislation, As a result of Patterson's speech the Democratic leaders have decided to all a caucus on the Dominican treaty.

Senator Tillman has called on the president for all the Santo Domingoorrespondence in the year 1904. The esolution was in the usual form and directed the president to send in the orrespondence "if not incompatible with public interest."

Mr. Allison (Rep., Ia.) objected to imnediate consideration, and the resoluon went over

Mr. Patterson (Dem., Colo.) in adfressing the senate on the Santo Domingo question supported the president's policy toward that republic. No executive save Andrew Jackson, he declared, bad waged such a fight against the aggressions of the money power, and he thought every Democrat should phold his hauds.

He also agreed with his colleagues regarding the participation of the United States in the Moroccan conference. The American delegates, he asserted, were properly participating, for the United States had large commercial interests there. He (Patterson) had no fear of becoming entangled in a European war if the conference should so result. The American delegates could vithdraw, and the war could go on. In dorocco, as in China, the United States stood for the open door, yet there was to entanglement when the war grew ut of the Manchurian situation. Mr. Patterson also approved the presdent's ideas regarding the scope of the Monroe doctrine and quoted extensively from history in support of it.

Taking up the question as to whether Mr. Roosevelt would again be a candidate for the presidency, Mr. Patterson was satisfied the president's disclaimer was made in good faith, besides he (Patterson) believed that the president's ambition was that his name should go down in history alongside those of Washington, Jefferson, Jackson and Lincoln as the friend of the people. Whether he would reach that innacle time alone would prove. He (Patterson) wished to assure the presitent of his humble support, and he believed the country would approve that political party which moved along the d down by Mr. Roosevelt. The Democratic senators are much disturbed over the speech of Senator Patterson and have called a party caucus to secure the co-operation of Demoeratic senators in opposition to the Considerable progress was made by the friends of the administration in the senate looking to the ratification of the Santo Domingo treaty. Secretary Root appeared before the senate committee on foreign relations and pointed out the secessity of prompt action.

Miss Roosevelt and Party, After Jolly Time, Returns to Washington WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.-Miss Alice Roosevelt, the Countess de Chambrun and the latter's brother, Representative Nicholas Longworth, brought their Pennsylvania railroad in the parior car Alice, in which the president's Manacled Negro Brought From Phildaughter and her flance arrived on Monday.

There is one secret you won't find out," Miss Roosevelt said, banteringly, to the reporters just before the de parture, "and that is where we will go immediately after we are married." She said she would not leave Washington again until after her marriage. On the way to the ferry Miss Roose velt got out of the cab in front of the in the Morocco conference and to his home of Dr. Morgan Dix and went in alone to see him for a five minute call. Miss Roosevelt experienced a slight irritation of the throat and called in Dr. W. G. Lyle, who, after treating her, said that the trouble was nothing serious.

Miss Roosevelt, after his departure, entered an electric hansom and drove to the home of Mrs. E. H. Harriman. At Mrs. Harriman's she remained t half hour and then drove to a modiste's in East Forty-eighth street.

On the way down she stopped to look at a horse which had fallen, but on seeing that he was not seriously hurt she did not alight.

Miss Roosevelt subsequently visited several stores in Fifth avenue. Among her purchases was an $800 Irish crochet lace gown. When leaving one of the shops a well dressed man forced his way through a crowd of nearly a thousand persons who had gathered to see the young woman and stepped briskly toward ber, holding a paper in is hand. Before he reached her, however, he was seized by Roundsman Thompson of the traffic squad, who forced him back into the crowd. The man afterward said his name

At Moorestown, where the murder was committed, a great crowd had col lected on the highway. The news that Johnson was to be brought through in an automobile had spread, and the mob was ripe for a rising.

As the big machine swept into the town the people thronged the street time. and threatened to stop the car, and ries of "Lynch the murderer!" were heard. Johnson shivered and trembled like one palsied.

A word was said to the chauffeur, and in an instant the mighty car, throbbing and pulsating, leaped forward. Like a meteor it tore along The crowd fell back. The most brave feared to face such a cutapult. At forty miles an hour the machine traveled through the village, leaving a cloud of dust behind it.

Johnson breathed free again when the danger was passed. The greater danger, however, was yet to come.

At the jail a crowd was waiting, and it was from these that the sheriff had most to fear. There had been open threats of violence to the murderer. and even with the force of deputies at his command Sheriff Norcross would have been powerless to prevent a lynching had the enraged farmers and townsfolk obtained possession of the murderer, but he was spirited into the fail through the rear entrance of the sheriff's residence
