PLUMBERS ARE KICKING

Now the plumbers are kicking. The mild winter is not relished by the followers of this craft. There are no frozen and bursted water-pipes and their services are little in demand. The local craftsmen, however, look for a busy spring trade and have already begun to get busy with new contracts.

COUNTY TREASURER'S FEES REDUCED

County Commissioners and Auditors Decide on a Reduction of One and One-Half Mills

At a meeting of the county auditors and commissioners held at Towanda last night the rate of compensation for the county treasurer was fixed at six mills. The present rate is seven and a half mills. This is equivalent to a reduction of nearly twenty per cent, and means a saving to the taxpayers of Bradford county of nearly seven hundred dollars. The reduction in the rate of treasurer's fees is doubtless due to the efforts of the taxpayers association which has contended that the fees of the treasurer were altogether too large. It was asserted that the fees should be cut in half but the commissioners and auditors failed to take this view of the matter and have decided that a twenty per cent reduction is all that the taxpayers should ask for.

DECISION RENDERED IN TROLLEY FIGHT

Judge Fanning Continues Preliminary Injunction Obtained by Sayre & South Waverly Street R. R. Co.

Judge Fanning has just filed an opinion in the equity case of the Sayre & South Waverly Street Railway Company versus the Athens, Sayre & South Waverly Company in which the preliminary injunction is continued.

On March 10, 1905, the plaintiff company was incorporated and organized for the purpose of constructing and operating a street railway from the state line on Fulton street in South Waverly to the junction of Lehigh avenue and Lockhart street in Sayre. Consent to build the line within the borough limits of Sayre on certain streets, including Keystone avenue, was obtained of the council of Sayre borough. The time limit for the construction of the work was later extended to May 1, 1906. The South Waverly borough refused to consent.

On April 1, 1905, the Athens, Sayre and South Waverly Street Railway Company was organized and incorporated. Nearly a month after the incorporation of the first mentioned company. The former company did not cover Keystone avenue. Later, however, certain extensions were granted the company covering the avenue named. Prior to this South Waverly borough had given consent to this company to build upon the streets of that municipality, which later was amended so as to include Keystone avenue. The Athens, Sayre and South Waverly company thereupon commenced the work of stringing wires and laying poles upon Keystone avenue, and this gave rise to the controversy. A temporary injunction was obtained by the Sayre and South Waverly Street Railway Company to restrain the other company from further construction. The court continues the injunction, giving as a reason therefor that the plaintiff company is acting in good faith, and that no other company can build on its proposed right under the charter granted.

A COMPLETE SUCCESS

"When Knighthood Was in Flower" as a stage production is a complete success. The events follow the scenes of the novel more closely than the casual reader would have thought possible. The story is as clear as if every line written in the book were spoken by the characters. From the opening scene in Windsor Park until the curtain drops on the final union of Mary Tudor and Charles Brandon (portrayed by John J. Farrell), Charles Major's book is before the audience. In short, the dramatization is conceded to be better than the novel, a fact which is seldom encountered. And in Virginia Drew Trescott, who portrays the charming Tudor madcap princess, the audience sees Mr. Major's delightful heroine stepped from the pages of fiction and vivified in a most convincing manner.

CHARGES SLANDER AND ASSAULT

Lena Craft Says That Her Cousin in, Mary Craft, Traduced Her Character and Then Violently Beat Her

Lena and Mary Craft are cousins and reside near each other in the borough of South Waverly. Both are young girls not yet out of their teens. For some time Mary and Lena have been on the outs, and that cousinly feeling which they ought to entertain for each other has been sadly strained. Lena alleges that Mary has been traducing her character, and dragging it in the mire. Mary, says Lena, has intimated that Lena is not what she ought to be, and that she is not following the paths of rectitude and righteousness.

When these unkind insinuations reached the ears of Lena, the latter went to see her cousin Mary. Mary was at her parents' home when Lena entered. Lena made known the object of her visit and there was a hair pulling match in which it is stated nearly all the members of the household took part. Lena claims that when she asked her cousin why she persisted in slandering her that her cousin struck her, and that her cousin's mother exhibited a knife and that for a time her very life was in danger. She managed to escape, however, and came to Sayre where she caused a warrant for Mary's arrest. The latter was taken in custody by Chief Walsh and will be given a hearing late this afternoon on the charge of assault.

TROUBLES GALORE

There was a man in Sayre yesterday who had troubles galore. He has been going under under several different names, according to the statements of merchants of whom he had purchased goods. At one store he purchased goods under the name of Joselyn, at another under the name of Gill, and at still another establishment under the name of Jones. Tuesday he attempted to place his goods on a Lehigh car. Several fraudulent debtors' attachments were forthcoming, but he managed to settle these matters, and his goods were released. Yesterday morning F. E. Seager caused the man's arrest for obtaining goods under assumed names and false pretense.

WERE WELL PLEASED

The Holy City, a play constructed from the incidents preceding and at the time of the crucifixion of the lowly Nazarene, was presented at the Loomis last night to a fair sized house. Those who witnessed the performance were pleased. The story of the production is taken from the Bible, and interest in the performance attaches from the rise of the curtain and is maintained until its fall on the last act. The company was a very creditable one and received frequent applause.

A suitable program has also been prepared which will be published later.

ENGINEER FELL FROM WATER TANK

Slipped on Thin Sheet of Ice and Landed on His Back on the Ground Below

Richard Robinson, a Lehigh Valley engineer who resides at No. 114 North Elmer avenue, was taken to his home this morning about eight o'clock suffering from the effects of falling from the tank of an engine in the Sayre yards this morning. Robinson is the engineer of the wrecking train and this morning had occasion to go out on the tank of the engine. He was proceeding along the side of the tank when he slipped on a thin sheet of ice. Before he could recover his footing he fell over the side of the tank to the ground, a distance of nearly ten feet, striking on his back. For a time it was thought that he had been seriously injured, and he was hastily taken to his home. Dr. H. A. LaPlant was called and found that the man's back was badly bruised and his right wrist also injured. Aside from laying him up for a couple of weeks it is thought no serious results will follow.
