DOROTHY M. PELOUBET

Athens--Mrs. Dorothy M. Peloubet died at the home of her son William S. Peloubet in Los Angeles, California, Saturday morning. She was the daughter of one of the old pioneers in this valley, Simon Spalding and for many years lived at the Curtis Thurston home on the west side of the Chemung river. It is thought that her remains will be brought to this place for interment.

DOWN 342 FEET

Athens--The oil well was drilled 342 feet yesterday noon when drilling was suspended a short time to drive down the casing. The drill passed through twelve feet of sand rock and is now in the blue rock foundation. The odor escaping from the well makes the men feel sick and the drillers are happy for they think it a sure indication of oil or gas.

DESPERATE WAR IN RIGA

Officials of Near Hanging Rebels in Province. RIGA, Feb. 4.--In spite of the presence of a large garrison, re-enforced by the police forces, and the employment of severe repressive measures, the revolutionists are waging a desperate war against the authorities in Riga itself, where the government is less firmly fixed than in the remote regions of the province.

There are constant collisions in the streets, and during the search of a building occupied by the Lettish Temperance society the lights were turned out and a hot fusillade interchanged between the revolutionists and the government forces in the darkness. The revolutionists left two dead behind, and it is thought they carried off others.

In the provinces the policy of summary execution of captured revolutionists continues. They are usually sentenced to hanging instead of shooting. The troops are retreating with the torch for the destruction of country houses. The ruins of every burned castle look down upon the ashes of consumed hamlets and cottages.

May End Chinese Boycott.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.--Secretary Mead of the department of commerce and labor has taken an important step which is expected to considerably ameliorate the friction between this country and China and perhaps cause the abandonment of the anti-American boycott when he approved the report of the special committee composed of Assistant Secretary Murray, Solicitor Sins and Richard Campbell of the bureau of immigration, providing for a radical revision of the existing regulations under which Chinese may enter and reside in the United States.

The Printers' Strike at Boston.

BOSTON, Feb. 4.--Secretary Sterling of the Typographical union said regarding the strike: "We do not expect to deal with the Boston Typothetae again. We did not hope to force them to sign an agreement, but we want to establish eight hours for the men, women and boys who work in printing offices, and we believe that, when that has been established for our members, the Typothetae members will gradually begin to feel that they must follow the lead."

Would Oust Dolan and Bellingham.

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 4.--At the session of the Pittsburgh district miners' convention Delegate McClintock presented a resolution demanding the resignation of President Patrick Dolan and Vice President Bellingham for violating the instructions of the Pittsburgh district miners in voting to accept the old scale at the Indianapolis convention. The resolution caused great excitement, but no action has yet been taken.

Smooth Trial Resumes.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.--The senate committee on privileges and elections resumed its hearings in the Senator Smoot case. Among the witnesses are the following officers of the reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints: A. H. Smith, chief patriarch, and C. E. Briggs, patriarch of Launoi, Ia.; H. C. Smith, apostle, and E. L. Kelly, bishop of Independence, Ia.; and F. M. Sheehey, apostle of Boston.

Weavers Strike at Eastville.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Feb. 4.--Seventy weavers at the Kent woolen mills in Centerville are on strike, and unless the looms are kept in operation it is said 125 other employees will be out of work. The weavers claim that they had been led to expect a 10 per cent advance, but only got 8 per cent.

Dead Postmaster Civil War Veteran.

FLORENCE, Mass., Feb. 4.--Postmaster George P. Bliss is dead at his home here after a brief illness, aged seventy-five years. He was well known throughout this section of the state. During the civil war he served in the First Connecticut artillery.

The Old Question.

"Don't you find it a little embarrassing to be engaged to a widower?" "Well, yes," admitted the young girl frankly. "I do. Every once in a while I find myself starting to ask him if I am really the first girl he ever loved."--Louisville Courier-Journal.

AWAKES TO FIND HIMSELF IN ARMY

BROOKLYN MAN HAS A WEIRD EXPERIENCE.

FALLS ASLEEP IN 'FRISCO.

Opens His Eyes in Honolulu and Discovers He is a Soldier En Route to Philippines--Protests in Vain.

New York--Sleep overcame him in San Francisco. He awoke in Honolulu, a prisoner in a guardhouse, wearing the khaki fatigue uniform of a private in the United States army. To say that he was much astonished would be to put it in its mildest form. He had not the least recollection of having enlisted in his country's service. His dazed eyes looked out on a strange land. He had lost all trace of time. Even his name had been changed.

HE AWOKES IN HONOLULU, A PRISONER IN A GUARDHOUSE.

city whizzed a wicked temptation to him to begin the celebration of the day thus early. The temptation was accentuated by the feel of a comfortable roll of bills in his pocket. His last venture had been a little prospecting speculation in the mountains of Cali-

FORGIVE THE TONIC CONSUMED WORTH $500--and Christmas just two days away!

He met friends by the score. Everybody seemed to be his friend. He dimly remembers falling in at last with a squad of merry-making soldiers, private from the Presidio. They took him to their arms and told him he was their long-lost friend. And now let Belyea himself take up this narrative:

"When I awoke I had not the slightest notion of my whereabouts. Everything was a blank to me. I felt stiff and sore. I spied a soldier in a khaki uniform and thought he must be one of the companions I had been drinking with. He had a gun on his shoulder and was marching up and down in front of my bunking place.

"Hello, matey," I called out. "What's up and where am I?" "You're in the guardhouse for assaulting everybody on board and a drum-head court-martial will be ready for you as soon as you get over the 'D. T.'s," is what the soldier boy came back at me with.

"Guard house, is it?" says I. "But what I really want to know is what part of the map of the world it happens to be on." The soldier told me that we were in Honolulu, in Camp McKinley, with a regiment of United States soldiers, on their way to the Philippines.

"I asked to see Maj. Davis, in command of the post. He sent an orderly to hear what the row was about. I told him I had never enlisted in the army, and didn't intend to serve, and that my family would make it hot for Maj. Davis and the war department if I was not let out of the guardhouse and sent back to San Francisco. One of the soldiers said that I must have enlisted, for I had been taken on board the transport Thomas in San Francisco and brought along with the regiment. He pointed to my uniform as evidence that I must have enlisted.

"All of my protests were for naught. I was bundled on board the transport Thomas with the regiment and sent to the Philippines. That was on February 12, 1902, and I had awakened from my long sleep on January 17. I had tried to establish the fact that I had never enlisted, but it was no use.

"We landed at Manila on March 3, and I was sent with a detachment of troops to the camp at Santa Mesa. Again I made a row about serving in the army when I had never enlisted, and was sent back to Manila and clapped into a guardhouse. After four days of it I was sent to serve with company I, at Lagulmanco, about 200 miles south of Manila.

"Part of the time in the next few weeks I was in the hospital, and Another Thing. Irrate Customer--Look here, young man, I bought this hair tonic from you and it is absolutely worthless. Barber--We can't help that, sir. "But you guaranteed each bottle." "Exactly, sir, but we didn't guarantee the tonic."--Stray Stories.
