SANDWICH MUST BE EATEN

London Public House Goes Farther Than the New Raines

Law.

A good deal of fun has been made from time to time over the New York Raines law sandwich, designed to comply with the requirements of the law that a meal should be furnished with drinks. It appears that the Raines law sandwich, locally regarded at home, has been taken seriously abroad, for in the east end of London there has been opened a public house of a novel sort.

In it it is not possible to purchase more than a limited quantity of ale at one time, and with that a sandwich must be taken. Moreover, the purchaser of the sandwich and the ale is allowed to remain in the bar only a sufficient time for their consumption; his further orders are refused and he may not loiter on the premises.

In other words, the eating of a sandwich is made compulsory, a condition which if attempted in New York would certainly lead to serious opposition from some of the steadiest patrons of saloons on Sunday. England has recently been vying with Scandinavian countries in its efforts to restrict the evils of intemperance, and the compulsory sandwich tavern is a variation of the non-alcoholic inn project, which obtained support from many temperance advocates in England, who believed that by the substitution of tea or coffee for strong drink many saloon patrons might be reclaimed from the error of their alcoholic ways.

In Norway and Sweden the Gothenburg system of making saloons as unattractive as possible and doing away with the plan of treating was tried, but the prohibitionists declare that since its adoption convictions for drunkenness in Gothenburg have increased from 31 in 1,000 to 54.

New Hydrocarbon

The Paris municipal authorities are extending their street lighting trials with "lucol," a hydrocarbon recovered as a by-product in making blast-furnace coke. The light is said to be even softer than that from alcohol, and a 100-candle lamp of the type hitherto employed costs only a farthing per hour, while the domestic lucol lamp gives double the light at half the cost of a good paraffin lamp. One great use of the new illuminant will be to form a reserve in case of unforeseen gas or electric light extinction.

An Exception

"Of course," began the man with the scientific turn of mind, "there is nothing quicker than thought."

"In woman there is," interrupted the chronic bachelor, "she always speaks before she thinks."—Philadelphia Press.

Illiterate Soldiers

In order to test the quality of mind of French soldiers, a set of questions—a kind of "general paper"—was sent to 62 soldiers at random. Of the 62, 17 could not write, and so did not answer at all.

New Australians

There are only a few Australians distributed throughout the United States, and their number is so small that in most of the official bulletins they come under the head of "miscellaneous."

TRAVELED IN A TRANCE.

American Losses Consciousness in California and Regains It in Australia.

A curious case of lapses of memory has just been revealed here on the arrival from the northern districts of New South Wales of an American, whose last remembrance was of Los Angeles, Cal. The American's story, says a Sydney correspondent of the London Mail, is vouched for by two Sydney doctors, who have investigated the circumstances. The mysterious traveler, whose name I am requested to withhold, left Parahoe, in California a few days before last Easter, intending to join his wife and family at Los Angeles. He remembers arriving there, but has no recollection of what happened afterward.

He awoke to find himself lying under a tree in the Australian bush, and was immensely astonished at seeing around him many unknown forms of vegetation. He noticed that his hands were hard and rough, though he had never consciously done a day's hard work. A bullock-driver passed him shortly after his awakening, and he at once inquired the way to Los Angeles. The man stared in astonishment, and answered that Hill End was the name of the nearest township.

The man without a memory thereupon asked the date, and was told that it was late in October, and that he was in New South Wales. He worked his way to Sydney, a distance of some hundreds of miles, and is now trying to obtain employment here to get the money to return to his family. He is in total ignorance as to their whereabouts and as to his own doings during the six months between April and October.

MUSIC A POWERFUL TONIC.

Clears Cobwebs from the Brain and Inspires a Higher Train of Thought.

Good music is a powerful tonic to many people, especially those suffering from melancholia. It lifts them out of their gloomy moods, dispels gloom and despondency, kills discouraged feelings and gives new hope, new life and new vigor. It seems to put a great many people into proper tune. It gives them the keynote of truth and beauty, strikes the chords of harmony, dispels discord from the life, scatters clouds and brings sunshine.

All good music is a character builder, because its constant suggestion of harmony, order and beauty puts the mind into a normal attitude. Music clears the cobwebs out of many minds, so that they can think better, act better and live better. Some writers are dependent upon music for their inspiration and their moods. Somehow it brings the muse to them. It adds brilliancy to the brain and facility to the pen which they cannot seem to get in any other way.

Good music seems to give us a touch of the divine and to put us in contact with divinity. It drives out evil thoughts, making us ashamed of them. It lifts us above petty annoyances and little worries of life and gives us a glimpse of the ideal which the actual is constantly obscuring.
