DRESS REFORM IN 1832.

Four "Don'ts" Proposed as a Start in the Right Direction.

A coterie of ladies at Amsterdam edit a periodical paper called the "Euphrosyne." It was this paper which first proposed the creation of a national costume for the female illees of the Dutch sovereign; and its example has been followed by a coterie of gentlemen, who now publish a "Journal for the promotion of a national costume for the gentlemen, and the encouragement of national industry."

If American editors would but engage in this cause with the zeal of the worthy myneers, we should confidently expect success in this matter of a national costume. Now we can only hope.

However, we will propose a few rules in our department of regulating female costume, as a sample of our taste. These will be prohibitory merely. Every person knows the necessity of eradicating or exposing false notions before enforcing right ideas.

1. No lady shall wear more than seven distinct colors in her dress at the same time—that being enough to form a rainbow.
2. No lady shall wear colored or clouded stockings with a white dress.
3. No married lady shall appear in a pink bonnet. (We should like to extend this prohibition to all ladies over 14.)
4. No lady, who hopes to be married, shall wear the hem of her gown above her ankles—Ladies' Magazine, 1832.

CAT AND RAT FELLOW PETS

In Peace They Share the Honor of Being a Warship's Mascots.

A sailor approaching the officer of the deck after retreat on board the Chicago recently and said, saluting: "Sir, may I have permission to go to the Saluton?"

"What for?" said the officer, relates the Honolulu Commercial Advertiser. "To get the cat," was the reply. "That cat is the pet of the ship. When the flagship went to Hilo, the cruiser's cat stayed behind to get acquainted with the cats of the tropics. He evidently got pretty well acquainted, for when the cruiser returned and 'the cat came back,' he was a battle-scarred veteran."

Beside the cat, the battleship boasts a rat. Not a plain rat, but a white rat from Bremen, Wash. That rat is also a pet, and is a glossy, well-fed, well-mannered rodent, as white as driven snow. The sailor who seems to be his special guardian says that the more he pounds the rat the better he likes him.

He crawls all over the boys, takes his cigarette smoke like a Spanish seppita, and makes himself quite at home wherever he is. But he never gets "shore leave."

The cat and the rat are the best of friends. Once in awhile the rat gets a little too familiar to suit his catship and bites the cat's lips with his sharp teeth. Then the cat looks pained and turns up his eyes to the boys for sympathy. He never seems to think of such a thing as eating up his companion.

WORK AS HORSE BARBERS

Crews at the Stockyards Put in Their Time Trimming the Nags.

One of the many unique occupations followed by men in the Chicago stockyards is that of "horse barber" and those who follow it have in recent years built up a business of no mean proportions. Eight or nine crews of these workers find a means to a living in the tattered hair and rough coats of the country horses shipped to the stockyards to be sold, says the Chicago Tribune.

Country horses usually come in with a ragged forelock, a mane which straggles over both sides of the neck and long hair on their legs. The first thing the bright shipper does is to take his "string" around to the barber and have them trimmed and the second thing he does is to tie himself to the nearest tonsorial artist and get a clean shave for himself. When the shipper and his horses meet again they don't know one another.

The horses have smooth, shiny coats, their legs are clean and sleek to look at and they have nice manes, falling evenly over one side of the neck—and somehow the neck looks a good deal more arched that way—and there are bows of bright ribbon tied in the rippling locks and bright ribbons are in the neatly braided tails, while the shipper himself is sprick and span from his recent "brush-up."

WANT A BALL TEAM

Waverly—An effort is being made by local base ball fans to organize a league of clubs composed of members of the different hose companies, and perhaps the Eagles and Knights of Columbus. The games could be arranged without much expense and as the teams would be composed entirely of home players would undoubtedly create considerable interest.

WILL SERVE SUPPER

Waverly—Friday evening of this week the Ladies' Aid society of the Methodist church will serve a supper in the church parlors. At 8 o'clock Mr. Adendorff, a Cornell student and a native of Johannesburg, South Africa, will give a talk.
