WISDOM OF THE FATHER.

Advises Son Against Mistake That Is Made by Many Young

The young man who had come home flushed with success and happy in the knowledge that his employer had voluntarily raised his salary, relates the Detroit Free Press.

"Coming great, dad!" said the boy "I know the work and they can't get

"My boy," said the father, knew the world well, "I am proud of your success. I am proud of you, but don't make the mistake that a man I knew once did. Don't get the idea that you are indispensable.

"This friend I speak of was a valu able man and a clever one. He thought he was not getting enough money so he asked his employer for an increase The employer willingly granted it The raise came so easy that the man began to think that he was indispensable. 'He can't get along without me. he said to himself. Three months later he asked for another raise.

"You're coming pretty strong, aren't you?' said the employer, in surprise I raised you only three months ago." "I know, said the man, but Jones wants me to work for him. He offers me more money, and if you want me you'll have to boost my pay."

"The employer knew that the man was clever and granted the demand. "Two months afterwards the man went back for a third time.

"You'll have to raise me again. said he. 'I am making all this money for you, and if you want me you'H have to give me more. You can't get alone without me and I must have the money to stay!

"The employer thought a minute and "What would we do if you were dead?

"Oh in that case, of course, you'd have to get along,' said the man. "Then, my friend, said the em ployer, 'we'll just consider you as

HUNTER'S NARROW ESCAPE Chased by Lion and Dragged Head Downward by Terrified Horse, But Lives to Tell Story.

Johannesburg, South Africa.-A letter just received here from Uganda gives an account of a narrow escape sustained by Capt. de Crispigny, who, with several other well-known English people, has been hunting big game in the North woods. Capt. de Crispigny was riding in advance of the party, which included Lord and Lady Waterford, when he came face to face with a full-grown lion in an open space.
