LOUIS A. WATRES FOR GOVERNOR

Lackawanna County Man is Making a Strong Fight With Excellent Chances for Success

Pennsylvanians are about to enter upon the campaign of 1906. In fact the real work of the campaign is now under way. A governor, lieutenant governor, members of congress, members of the legislature, and minor state officers are to be elected. Naturally the office of governor of this great Commonwealth has already become a subject of great solicitude. By placing a name on the head of the ticket with a clean public record the Republican party has a splendid opportunity to regain the confidence of the masses. Men of that class are to be had.

The Republicans of northeastern Pennsylvania have already rallied to the support of a man who will meet these requirements—the kind of a man that must be nominated if the Republican party is to remain in power in the executive department of the state government. They have selected a man in whom the people at large have the utmost confidence. A man whose record is unsullied and who will lead the Republican party to victory.

Col. Louis A. Watres of Lackawanna county, is known to every voter in the state, and unless there is a decided change of heart his name will adorn the Republican ticket as a candidate for governor. Mr. Watres' friends in this section of the state are legion and they will make an earnest, determined and persistent fight for his nomination. He is regarded as being entirely fit for the important post, because he has represented all which is best and most honorable in political life. His integrity, devotion to principles, regard for the interests of the people, and respect for public sentiment are too well known to be extensively commented upon.

Here is a brief record of his public life: He served two terms in the state senate, being elected at a time when his district was overwhelmingly Democratic. After that he was elected lieutenant governor by a majority of over 23,000, when the candidate for governor was defeated by more than 17,000. That election demonstrated the confidence of the people in the honor and integrity of Louis A. Watres. He retired from the office of lieutenant governor with the increased respect of his fellow citizens and the people of this state.

Like thousands of others, Mr. Watres believes in party organization but he has always advocated that the organization should be kept within the bounds of common honesty and sound public policy. He is not an eleventh hour reformer, but what he is today he has always been. He is the same kind a Republican as Roosevelt, Root and Taft. With such a man at the head of the state government this grand old Commonwealth would be redeemed and restored to its proper place among the honestly governed states of the union.

Louis A. Watres embodies in himself the elements that constitute the model custodian of a public trust in this republic. He is a man of courage, of steadfastness to duty, of loyalty to principle.

The people of this section of Pennsylvania should urge his candidacy. The Republicans, when they meet in county convention, will do no better than to see that Mr. Watres is endorsed for the place. Voters should remember this when they go to the primaries.

BAILEY ON RATE BILL.

Talked to Senate on Cases in Equity and in Law.
WASHINGTON, April 11.—Almost every seat in the senate was filled and the gallery was packed to hear Senator Bailey's speech on the rate bill. Senator Bailey began talking as soon as the morning business was finished.

He immediately entered upon the discussion of his proposition looking to the withdrawal of the power of the inferior courts to suspend the orders of the interstate commerce commission, referring to the contention that there would be a distinction between the powers of congress over cases in equity and in law.

"If," said Mr. Bailey, "the president is commanded by a statute to perform a certain duty he does not consider the authority is given directly by the constitution. The constitution is the source of all power, but it is a dead letter unless congress breathes into it the breath of life."

"If," he said, "congress can destroy proceedings in equity it can destroy proceedings in law." This, he said, had been conceded by his opponents, as had also been the point that the inferior courts derived their power from acts of congress and not from the constitution.

As the only point the distinction between the judicial power of the United States and the jurisdiction of the federal courts, for which Mr. Knox and Mr. Spooner contend.

As for himself he considered this a fine point, so fine, indeed, that he felt it would go far to justify Mr. Tillman's characterizations of the refinements of the law. He did not consider the point material.

Mr. Bailey set out with the one end in view of establishing the soundness of his contention that congress has the power to deny to the inferior United States courts the right to suspend the orders of the interstate commerce commission pending the final decision of cases arising under the proposed law. This he undertook to do by citing innumerable decisions of the courts and quoting many other authorities.

There was a significant suggestion from Mr. Hale indicating the possibility of an understanding and an early vote on the rate measure.

ASKS FOR HIS LIFE.

Charles L. Tucker, Condemned Murderer, Sends Plea to Governor.

BOSTON, April 11.—A plea for mercy and a request that the sentence of death now hanging over him be commuted to life imprisonment were embodied in a letter to Governor Guild, written by Charles L. Tucker, the convicted murderer of Mabel Page, and sent by Robert Walker, chaplain of the Middlesex county jail, where Tucker is confined.

Tucker at the outset asserts his innocence of the crime of which he stands convicted and for which he has been sentenced to death by electrocution during the week of June 10. He declares that he has been a victim of peculiar circumstances and that his conviction was contrary to the evidence which was brought out at his trial.

The young man endeavors to show that it was impossible for him to traverse certain distances in the time allotted to him by the prosecution. In closing young Tucker wrote:

"I do not ask anything but a fair chance at your hands. My case will soon come before you. My life will be in your power, and I pray and implore you that you carefully consider the evidence and see that justice is done. I ask only that my sentence be changed to life imprisonment because time will show my innocence."

WHEN LAW WAS IN THE BUD

The Bar of Justice and the Barroom Were Very Closely Related.

When men want to do a thing they legalize it; and the things they do not want to do they place a penalty on. We do not refrain from doing a thing because it is against the law, but we pass a law against the thing we refrain from doing, says the New York American.

In England, during the reign of the barons, it was a crime for a lawyer to accept a fee. The lawyer was a clerk or interpreter for the court, and his business was simply to assist the claimant in presenting his case to the judge in an expeditious and intelligent form, it having been discovered that most claimants were louts and lubbers, with no definite idea as to what they wanted or what they were entitled to. To save the time of the court, clerks were employed, called barristers, to examine each case and see if the man had any real grounds for grievance, and if he had, help him explain it to the court.

A bar ran across the room to separate the claimants from the judge or judges, for the judge often called in friends to sit with him on the woolsack.

The late Irving Browne, in a paper called "The Curiosities of the Law," tells how at the close of court the English magistrate in the twelfth century ordered a portion of grog to be given to every person present, this being passed over the bar by the barristers, the desire being to send everyone away happy and to prove to all parties that the judge acted without prejudice. It will thus be seen that the barroom and the bar of justice are nearly related. In fact, the first barroom was a courtroom.

When a young man was admitted to the bar it meant that he could go on either side of the bar at will.

CLUBWOMEN TO RESCUE.

They Have Supplied a New Field to the Teacher of Eloction.

The occupation of the woman elocutionist might be gone altogether but for a new field for her labors that has recently come into existence.

The day of speaking pieces is past. Young ladies no longer rise in the drawing room to recite: "Of all the operas that Verdi wrote, 'Or to Intense' Lorraine, Loree." Even at school commencement there is no place on the programme for the old-fashioned recitations.

The elocutionists, therefore, might have been very hard up for work had there not arisen a new demand for their services. It was created by the women's clubs.

When women want to deliver a speech with great effectiveness they learn it by heart and the teacher of elocution does the rest. She teaches them how to deliver it periods in the most effective way and how to hurl it peroration at the bonnets of the assembly in manner certain to arouse enthusiasm.

Elocution was declining art until the clubwomen came to its rescue.

Halley's Comet in Four Years.

The next important comet to be expected within our range of vision will appear in 1910. It is known as Halley's comet and its first recorded appearance was in 11 B. C., since when it has appeared regularly every 76 years. Prof. Pickering, of Harvard, explains that the earth has a cometary tail of its own at certain times. This tail is composed of those great auroras that sometimes envelop the earth's polar regions.
