In striking out the words "in its udgment" the senate defeated one of he Allison compromise propositions. The words were in the bill as it came from the house and during all the discussion a great deal of opposition to son court review and other compromise provisions were being considered the friends of the original Hepburn bill insisted that the words "in its judgment" should be retained in the bill, and they assert that they became a part of the compromise agreement.

In eliminating these words it is asserted the agreement has been broken, but this did not affect the other features of the bill as the other Allison amendments have been retained.

The clerk was permitted to read the amendments, covering ten pages, without interruption, and it looked us if he might proceed to the end when Senator La Follette offered an amendment permitting railroad companies to grant passes to ffic officers of railroad employees' associations. The amendment was adopted after only a brief delay. Senator Carter proposed an amendment in the interest of small roads to the provision prescribing a penalty for false entries in the accounts of railroads. He proposed to strike out the provision requiring railroads to keep only such books as prescribed by the commission. Senator Tillman opposed the amendment as fatal to the prohibition against rebates. The amendment was defeated.

The rate bill was soon completed and was ready to pass when Mr. Rayner took the floor.

Mr. Rayner said that he expected the president would change his opinion again before the bill was finally enacted and get back to the Long amend-

"The president," he said, "resembled a kaleidoscope. This was a great era for patural disturbances and the prestdent seemed jealous of the earthquakes and volcanoes. He went tearing through space oblivious of where he came from and with no conception of where he was going." The president, said Mr. Rayner, may bave united his party in the senate, but had divided the people. He claimed the Allison court review amendment destroyed the bill and deplored the president's interference.

Additional evidence of gifts by coal companies to railroad officials was adduced before the interstate commerce commission. E. J. Cleave of Cresson. Pa., superintendent of the Cambria and Clearfield division of the Pennsylvania railroad, was asked if he held stock in any coal companies. He said he had 250 shares in the Cochran Coal company, which he received in partial payment for land sold to the company.

"Had you ever been offered stock in any coal companies?" inquired Attorney Glasgow. "Is it necessary to answer that question?" asked the witness.

"I was offered stock, but declined to accept it."

PITTSBURG, May 19. - Alexander Berkman, who made an attempt on the great steel strike at Homestead, Pa., in 1892, was released from prison, baving served thirteen years in the Western penitentiary and one year in the Alle gheny workhouse. Berkman was sentenced to serve twenty-three years' imprisonment, but earned a commutation of sentence by good behavior which reduced his term to fourteen years. Deputy Superintendent Johnson of the Allegheny police department and three Pittsburg detectives met Berkman upon his release and notified his to leave the city at-once. He replied

BERKMAN'S ATTACK ON FRICK. with their wishes and he would take Opportunies

It is said that plans to keep him under surveillance have been carefully worked out and that he will be con stantly shadowed by private detectives in the employ of Mr. Frick.

Mr. Frick's home at 640 Fifth avenue, New York, will be guarded night and day. Throughout the fourteen Genuine Galatea Cloth years since Berkman shot him Mr. Frick has been in constant fear of anarchists, and now that his arch enemy is free this fear has been increased. Nothing will be taken for granted, and if Mr. Frick is again the object of a murderous attack he will have about him every safeguard that Mr. Frick was then at the head of the Carnegie Steel company. On the afternoon of July 23 after lunching at the Duquesne club he returned to his office. While he was in his private office Berkman went upstairs, having shadowed him all the way from the club, and handed the office boy a card upon which was written, "A. Berkman, representing the New York Employment agency." The boy had hardly returned from the office with word from Mr. Frick that he would see his visitor in a minute or so when Berkman strode into the office. The next moment he drew bis revolver and pointed it at the financier, who was seated at his desk talk. ng with Vice President Leishman. The first shot plowed its way through the left side of Mr. Frick's neck. Another shot was fired, and a second bullet entered his neck. By this time Mr. Leishman had run forward and, seizng the assailant by the hand, threw it oack. The third shot went wild, and was batted hard. In the third Pierce the bullet imbedded itself in the ceil-
