Canada Sends Frisco $50,000. OTTAWA, Ont., June 20.—The finance minister announced in the house that the Dominion government on the advice of the British consul at San Francisco had forwarded $50,000 of the $100,000 voted for the relief of the sufferers there to James D. Phelan, president of the relief committee and Red Cross society. The government is in correspondence as to the disposition of the balance. There was no limitation accompanying the $50,000. It is for relief generally.

Fighting Natal Rebels. MAPILI, Natal, June 20.—Rebels attacked a convoy of five wagons, but the convoy got away though pursued for two miles. A force of sixty which was sent out from Mapilum to protect the wagons encountered 500 rebels who were arranging an ambush. An engagement ensued, lasting an hour and a half, during which the rebels three determinedly charged the Natal force. The rebels ultimately fled, leaving sixty of their number dead.

EMMETT HARDER

Athens—Emmett Harder died at his home in Owego day before yesterday, after a long and severe illness. He was one of the skilled machinists that was employed in the Shipman & Welles Junction Iron Works, in Athens, in early times, when that establishment was one of the leading industries of this county. John Harder, a soldier of the Revolutionary war, was living in Athens at the time. Emmett was a nephew of his, and came from Binghamton, and resided here until the Shipman & Welles works were sold and removed to Scranton. At that time many of the skilled workmen went to Alabama, and Emmett went with them, where he remained several years. Returning to Owego he enlisted as a lieutenant in Company K, Twenty-sixth New York Infantry, in which command he served two years, when his regiment was mustered out of service. He married Miss Lucy A. Chamberlain, one of the foremost young ladies in Owego, and soon after engaged in the mercantile business, which he continued to carry on up to the time he became so feeble that he was obliged to give up all work. He had one of the finest homes in Owego and his friends were legion.

He was the first foreman of Protection Hose Company when it was organized in Athens in 1855, and continued to hold that position until he removed from Athens. His funeral occurred today from his Owego home, and a delegation from Protection Hose, composed of Lee Stacey, E. M. Crawford, F. K. Harris and C. T. Hull, attended the funeral, taking with them a memorial wreath as a tribute from the company.

Poor Fire Protection. With the exception of the larger towns the precautions against fire in France are remarkably inadequate. Many towns of from 500 to 3,000 people have no water supply other than ordinary wells, operated generally by buckets draws instead of pumps, and no fire apparatus except occasionally a hand force pump, such as is used by contractors.

Youngest Governor. Herbert J. Hagerman, a native of Milwaukee, lately inaugurated governor of New Mexico, was born in 1811 and is the youngest governor in the country. Being unmarried and wealthy besides having a pleasing personality, he is looked upon with much favor by society in the territory. He has already received a number of rather mushy letters from young women.

Books in China. The Chinese imperial commissioners, in the Boston Public library the other day, expressed great astonishment that no one could tell them which book in the library was the oldest. From the Chinese point of view the oldest book is the best. There are no "six best sellers" in China. A book under 1,000 years old is read by no self-respecting man.

HORSE WAS OBSERVANT. Remarkable Sagacity of an Ordinary Farm Animal Described by Owner. Another champion of the reasoning power of animals has come forward with a special instance. A retired farmer living in Kansas City says that he once had a farm horse that undoubtedly possessed reasoning faculties. This horse, he says, "was once injured by barbed wire, and he had a wholesome dread of barbed wire ever after. He could not be induced to step across wire lying on the ground one day, when this horse was grazing in the pasture, I started with another team to water them at a pond. To reach this pond I went through a gate into a field and on through the field, going out on the other side by crossing the fence wires lowered to the ground and fastened. The horse in the pasture, seeing that I was driving the team to water followed until he came to the place where I crossed the wires. He refused to do it and went back and around the field. "The next day he followed the team again going to water, having forgotten about the wires that lay in the way. While down in a hollow out of sight of the fence in either direction the cogitative horse suddenly remembered that those wires were probably lying in the same position they were the day before. Tossing up his head with a disgruntled snort, he turned and trudged back around the field. That was a case of reason. From cold facts and propositions retained in his memory and not excited by any new perceptions, he reflectively reasoned out that he'd have to make a detour sooner or later and he might as well start now.

PONKAPOG PLANTATION. Six Thousand Acres of New England Soil Granted Indians in 1657. Ponkapog, the unpretentious, and Canton, the town corporate, are embracing bits of historic soil. Moreover, to such as love to trace the beginnings of things, Blue Hills—the old Chevrolet Hills of John Smith's "Journal"—will furnish a creditable list of civic and industrial benefactions which had their origin in this locality. While the white men were making themselves homes and becoming landed proprietors in this section, so richly endowed by nature, the Indians were crowding into more restricted quarters. At his juncture "there came one preaching in the wilderness" to them—that wonderful man, the apostle Eliot. The Indian plantation at Ponkapog, "not exceeding 6,000 acres" was granted in 1657, and became "the Second Praying Town." These sons of the forest not only hunted, fished, helped the early settlers build their houses and gather their crops, but the more ambitious learned to prepare shingles and clapboards for the Boston market. HUSKS FOR SAUSAGE. A Cherokee county (Kan.) farmer, raises corn husks for hot tamales. Twenty bunches make a gunny sack full, worth about $2. The best husks are selected and bleached to a white color by a new process. Packing-houses are also using corn husks for casing sausages. Why Couldn't She Keep Them? Mrs. Nagget—Well, I guess I have a perfect right to my opinions. Mr. Nagget—Certainly you have, my dear. And if you only kept them to yourself no one would ever question that right.—Stray Stories. Unique Translation. A Spanish newspaper reporting the launching of the British battleship Dreadnought the other day, translated the ship's name to mean "nothing terrible."
