DISPELLING HAILSTORMS.

Experiments of German Meteorologist Who is Battling with the Clouds.

Herr Stiger of the meteorological bureau of Vienna battles with the clouds. In almost every country on the continent where agriculture is the people's mainstay there is a systematic use of scientific warfare with cloud shooting cannon for the purpose of dispelling threatened hail storms.

HAY AN ARTIST IN WORDS.

Unerring Sense of Fitness in Selection Rendered Speech Incomparable.

It is hard for those who knew and loved Hay—and all who knew him did love him—to reconcile themselves to the thought, writes Joseph Bucklin Bishop, in "A Friendship with John Hay" in Century, that he can draw no more pictures for us; that this admirable and perfect and rarely matched artist in words can delight us no more forever.

HAD NARROW ESCAPE

Waverly—Three boys went out in a row boat on the Chemung river yesterday. The river is high, the current swift, and when near the D. L. & W. bridge the boat overturned throwing all three into the water. Two of them could swim and reached shore but the third was unable to do so.

Waverly—The improvements made by the Lackawanna about their depot has aroused much favorable comment. The street has been paved with granite block, and the high terrace on the north has been sodded and a new fence placed on top of the terrace.

THEY SURPRISED HIM

Waverly—Yesterday was the birthday of George M. Legg, but that important fact had not occurred to him, and when his wife suggested that they take a lunch and spend the day up at Dry brook he thought nothing strange of the suggestion and readily assented. He was somewhat surprised at the weight of the lunch that was provided, but obediently took the basket on his arm and went on his way. As they proceeded they were joined by one friend after another until they had considerable of a company and when they had arrived at their destination the company numbered 24. They then informed Mr. Legg that he was 41 years old, and they presented him an easy chair in the shape of a large round boulder, upon which he sat while he devoured his share of the provender. He says it was a mean trick but he hasn't yet decided on any course of action.
