EYE WITNESS TELLS GRAPHIC STORY

Vivid Description of San Francisco's Earthquake Horror

The San Francisco earthquake horror, as described in the papers, was one of the heartrending calamities that touched the sympathetic feelings of the whole world as perhaps no like disaster has done since time began. But what must it have been to an eye witness is a query that no one can answer.

Sunday noon there arrived in Athens a slender, delicate woman, whose countenance bore the marks of excessive nervous strain, and whose gray hairs crowned a brow of extreme mental exhaustion. She had traveled continuously from Monday, making the journey to Sayre Saturday at midnight. This is Mrs. Josephine Brown Hughes, a daughter of Dr. Jared D. Brown, formerly of this county, who went to California in 1857, and she was born in San Francisco and has lived there all her life. All of her family are dead except one sister, Madame Camille Bourget, residing in Paris, and she has sent for her to come and spend the remainder of her life with her.

Mrs. Hughes was boarding with a Mrs. Koenig on Leavenworth street, and was awakened on that fateful morning, April 18, by the severe shock which seemed to take hold of her and shake her prostrate on the floor. This was preceded by a dull, stifling atmosphere that made her feel sick at the stomach. She, with the other inmates of the house, rushed down to the ground, where they stood and watched the falling buildings for a time; this first shock continuing at intervals for forty eight seconds. They then returned to the house where they stayed until night, when at about 10 o'clock the officer came and said the fire would soon reach them from Market street and they must leave. She packed up a few necessary articles of clothing in a straw telescope package and attached a rope to draw it with, and together with about a dozen others, started for a place of safety. One poor woman in the company had three trunks which she attempted to haul along with ropes. They started out for Golden Gate Park, where the rescue camp was located. When Mrs. Hughes reached Sacramento street she stopped at the residence of a friend, but found them all gone, but she left her baggage there and continued her journey to the cathedral near the camp. Here she found the grounds roped off and a large party of rescuers from the Sisters of Charity and the Sisters of the Sacred Heart at work caring for the sufferers. She joined in this work, going out far into the streets and bringing in many who were overcome by the heat and exhaustion and giving them shelter and rest and food.

In the meantime General Funston with his army had erected tents and the Red Cross society had provided temporary homes for the people, and the work of caring for 200,000 famished and starving persons was in full force. The stately palaces on Nob hill and the heights had now succumbed to the devouring element and the flames encircled the cathedral, and as the wooden cross on the steeple took fire Mrs. Hughes saw Father Philip O'Ryan climb to the dizzy heights with a fire hose wound around him and extinguished the fire and the noble edifice was saved. The people were brave and courageous and she saw men rushing about with their eyes filled with tears but manfully assisting those in distress. Mrs. Hughes found one woman 85 years old in a bewildered state, dressed only in a night robe and having a slipper on one foot and a dilapidated old shoe on the other. She dressed the old lady in comfortable clothes and shoes and the gratitude manifested was very pathetic. One woman had lost her baby and it was a full day before it was found.

Many persons who were in easy circumstances have lost everything and are now compelled to begin life anew. Mrs. Hughes says she seen men who were formerly worth from thirty to forty thousand dollars now glad to get work cleaning mortar off bricks. Workmen command good wages, and some men who were lawyers, merchants and clerks are now working at the common laborer's wages.

When she started on her journey she hired a drayman to take her trunk to the station and as he unloaded it she noticed that he handled it bunglingly. On looking him in the face she recognized him as a young physician who was formerly on duty at one of the hospitals. He said he had to earn a livelihood in some way and so he had hired out as a deliveryman.

The people do not complain. They say they have been unfortunate, but they are still hopeful and are determined to get on their feet again, and so they are working at anything they can find to do and trusting for better times.

One feature Mrs. Hughes mentions, that with this dire calamity upon them their minds were turned into spiritual channels. They do not look upon it as a retribution but as a chastening and they are holding three religious services every day, and the people of all classes and conditions in life attend them and manifest a devout demeanor. One young Catholic priest, Father William P. Sullivan has been holding these meetings at Camp Rescue and the people of all denominations have flocked to them and they have erected a kind of tabernacle where they join together in the services.

Mrs. Hughes will remain at Mrs. Junia Brown until thoroughly rested when she will resume her journey to Paris, and she will make her future home with her sister, Madame Camille Bourget.

MRS. MARTHA SAWYER

Waverly—Mrs. Martha Sawyer died this morning shortly before 10 o'clock at her home at 416 Cheung street, from a stroke of apoplexy. She had been in her usual health until last Saturday afternoon she suffered a stroke and was found by her son, F. A. Sawyer, in an unconscious condition. Owing to her advanced age her recovery was uncertain and this morning she succumbed. Mrs. Sawyer was a descendant of one of the oldest and best known families in this vicinity. Her maiden name was Martha Hanna, and her father, George Hanna, was a son of one of the original settlers of Elliptown. Her husband, Charles H. Sawyer, died about 12 years ago. She is survived by one son, Fred H. Sawyer, cashier of the Citizens National bank, and by two sisters, Mrs. Emmett Holbert and Mrs. Lyman Buck, and by one brother, Quigg Hanna of East Waverly. The deceased had a wide circle of friends who mourn her demise. She was a member of the Presbyterian church and a woman of high character and cheerful temperament, and many have found in her a helping friend in time of misfortune. The funeral will be held at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon from her late home on Cheung street. The service will be conducted by Rev. P. R. Ross and the remains will be interred at Forest Home cemetery.
