His clothing was stripped from his body and the flesh burned. He died twenty minutes after the explosion in great agony, begging to be killed. The negro fell inside the burning tank, his screams telling his location. Firemen got on top of the tank and with a rope which he grasped drew him out, the burned flesh slipping from his hands and body.

Into Diamond Lake. Great Northern Fast Mail Plunges Seventy Feet. SEVEN LIVES LOST; A SCORE HURT. Wreck Near Camden, Wash., Caused by "Sun Kinks" Spreading Rails. Engine Crew Were Killed at Their Posts. SPOKANE, Wash., July 25.—At least seven lives were lost, seven persons were seriously injured and a score of others sustained cuts and bruises in a wreck of the fast mail train on the Great Northern a mile and a quarter east of Camden, Wash., near here, when the locomotive, mail, baggage and smoking cars left the rails on emerging from a tunnel and plunging over a seventy foot embankment, were submerged in the waters of Diamond lake. Spreading rails, probably caused by "sun kinks," is given as the cause. Immediately after the smoker struck the water there was a blinding flash, which spread over the part of the car not submerged, and a fire followed. The impact was so terrific that several cars on the rear of the train were wrenched and twisted, and the fact that the couplings did not break on the dining, tourist and sleeping cars was the only thing that averted even greater loss of life. Engineer Munson and Fireman Bell evidently stuck to their posts. It is believed they are in the locomotive, which is in from one to five hundred feet of water. Two divers made half a dozen attempts to find the locomotive, but they were not successful. J. S. Hinneman, a contractor for construction work on the Oregon Railroad and Navigation company, broke through a window to escape from the burning and half submerged smoker.

Father Held in Strub Tragedy. GREAT BARRINGTON, Mass., July 25.—When the inquest to determine the manner of the death of young John Strub, the twelve-year-old boy whose body was found concealed in the woods near Housatonic, was adjourned, Eula Strub, the boy's father, was taken downstairs to the lockup in the basement of the town hall, where the inquest was held. The authorities were refused to say why this step was taken, but although the proceedings of the inquest were private it was understood that the examination of the witnesses elicited some evidence of a sensational nature. Strub took the announcement that he would be detained calmly enough, but his wife and daughter, who were at the inquest, wept as they bade him good night.
