BOUGHT GIRL A DIAMOND RING

Letter Referring to the Gift Fell Into Wife's Hands and Man in the Case Left Town

A well known West Sayre man is missing from his home, and efforts of his family to trace him farther than Elmira have thus far proved unavailing. The reasons for his being absent have just come to light and the story is one that will be read with interest.

It appears that for some time the man, who has long since passed the meridian of life, has been enamored of a fair young damsel who also resides in West Sayre. The girl is said to be only eighteen and unusually good looking.

The man, who is married, and has a grown up daughter, is said to have recently received a letter from the girl, in which she acknowledges receiving a sum of money and also refers to a diamond ring, costing $40, which he had purchased for her. Unfortunately for the man the letter in some unaccountable manner fell into his wife's hands, and then the lur flew. A diamond ring purchased by a man for a woman other than his wife is particularly conducive to exciting the green-eyed monster to activity, and this case was no exception to the rule.

The letter also named a date for a meeting and contained little nothings that did not tend to soothe the injured feelings of the wife.

Upon learning that the telltale letter had fallen into the hands of his better half and also fearing the wrath of the girl's father, the man in the case quietly gathered up his personal effects, and like the Arab, stole away in the night. He went to Elmira, at least he was traced that far by members of the family; but a diligent inquiry failed to elicit any further information as to where he had gone. The letters which he had sent to the girl, a question have been placed in the hands of a well known lawyer, but as the principal in the affair is missing it is difficult to determine just what the lawyer can do.

The story has created no end of talk among those who are acquainted with the facts and the scandalmongers and gossips have been busy night and day since the affair came to their notice.

TURNED ON THE HOSE

Yesterday afternoon two men went to a well known livery stable to secure a rig. It is alleged that both were in an intoxicated condition, one of them being "more so" than the other. The proprietor of the stable was away, and in his absence his wife attends to the business of letting rigs. When she saw the condition of the men she refused to let them have a rig. Then she alleges that the men became abusive to her 11-year-old daughter, and when she told them to leave the premises they refused. She picked up a hose which was handy and one of the men was given a drenching. Then he left.

BODY IDENTIFIED

The body of the stranger who was run over in front of the depot at Mauch Chunk last week has been identified as that of Valentine Sobasco of South Bethlehem. The body was interred in Lehighton cemetery, and was identified by four countrymen.

FAILED TO INDICT

The grand jury failed to indict Jacob Solomon, the Desmond street clothier, charged by A. Atkin with having taken a gold watch from the latter's vest pocket.

The man who was found near the Lehigh Valley station at Geneva Sunday morning has been identified as John Bennis, a farm laborer, who has been employed near that place. It is presumed that he fell while jumping from a freight train.

SEVERE STORM HIT THE LEHIGH HARD

Auburn Division Near Smithboro Was Tied Up for a Time

The severe electric storm which passed north of this section during the early part of last night hit the Lehigh rather hard, especially on the Auburn branch near Smithboro. At that place a creek washed a large quantity of gravel onto the tracks. In one place the tracks were covered for a distance of nearly fifty feet, and at another point the road bed was covered for a considerable distance. Passenger trains were run over the D. L. & W. to Waverly, and it was not until early this morning that the tracks were cleared.

The village of Smithboro was also hit hard. A small creek which runs to the north of the town overflowed its banks, washing away two barns and several outbuildings. Many gardens were destroyed, wagon roads were badly damaged and the entire town felt the effects of the severe storm. The storm raged for nearly two hours and it is regarded as the worst storm of the present season.

Later advices from Smithboro say that the damage wrought by the storm at that place is extensive. A creek which runs at right angles through the center of the town caused all the trouble. Over the creek in the business part of the town is a concrete bridge and the space underneath was not large enough to allow the immense volume of water to go through. The water backed up into the town and soon the water in the main street was several feet deep. A haystack came down from the hillside and when it reached the bridge was diverted, finally landing directly in front of the postoffice. The postoffice was submerged and there were several feet of water on the floor. Private residences also suffered badly, as did pigs, fowls and small livestock.

Old inhabitants say that the storm was the worst ever experienced in that section. A huge black cloud resembling a waterspout hung over the hill to the north, and for over an hour it poured forth torrents.

Owego is also said to have suffered extensively from the storm, and on Hiawatha Island two barns were struck by lightning and burned.

Lewis Mayhood, formerly a clerk in the special officers' office of the Lehigh Valley, has again assumed the duties of the position, beginning work yesterday.

Only a small portion of the severe storm struck Sayre. The little rain that fell, however, settled the dust, which for the past several days had become annoying.

ANOTHER RUNAWAY ON WEATHERLY HILL

Caboose and Express Car Dashed Down Grade, Resulting in a Costly Wreck

There was another lively runaway at Weatherly early Saturday morning. A caboose and express car broke away from a Lehigh Valley freight train which was standing on a siding at Weatherly, and dashing down the grade for five miles at a terrific rate of speed, crashed into an engine and steam wrecker at Penn Haven Junction, causing one of the most expensive wrecks that has occurred on that division of the Lehigh in some time. A fire that ensued completed the work of destruction. The express car was piled high with valuable packages and the engine and steam wrecker were badly damaged. The wrecked engine was removed to the Weatherly shops today.

OAK GROVE PARK

The Partello Stock Co. opened the last week at Oak Grove Park last night with Mark Swan's clever little play entitled "The Ranchman's Daughter." The play certainly pleased a large audience present. Miss Kennedy, Mr. Leland and Mr. Sigman made hits in very good parts. The rest of the company were well cast and helped the general result. Paul & Reynolda made a hit in their specialty and Mr. Taylor scored in a bag punching act. The play will be repeated this evening and tomorrow evening the rural drama entitled "The Minister's Sweetheart" will be presented. By special request the company will give one performance Friday evening of the "College Girl." Many missed this clever play on account of excursions, etc. And Friday the circus can be seen in the afternoon and the "College Girl" at the Park in the evening.

The heat of the past few days has been very oppressive. Everybody is complaining.
