torm Battered Liner Arrives at Ne York-Wild Bulls and Wine Casks In Mixup on Rolling Decks. Durkness Under Hatches

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.-The Italian steamship Massilia, which sailed from Palermo on Sept. 1 with 622 steerage passengers, was swept by a terrible hurricane on Sept. 11.

While twenty-five of the crew, armed with rifles, were on guard at the doors and hatchways 500 frantic Greeks and Italians were climbing over each other to get to the decks, panic stricken women were shricking and praying, the ship was bouncing like a toy on the waves, and mountains of water swept lashed themselves on the bridge and remained there during the ten hours' duration of the storm. During the height of the gale the heavy seas smashed a pen containing several bulls, which floundered about the decks, bellowing with terror. A aumber of wine casks which were lashed on deck broke adrift at the same time, and the decks were a scene of indescribable confusion with the seas breaking over the ship at every roll. The flying wine casks broke the legs of the buils, and one of them was washed overboard.

Captain Murii and his chief officer

Meantime there was a scene simos terrifying under the battened hatches of the steamer, where the immigrants were confined to prevent them from reaching the decks and being washed into the sea. While the steamer was rolling and pitching heavily two electric light wires in the immigrants' quarters became erossed, and the explosion which followed added to the terror of the passengers, who were already either on their knees praying or fighting among themselves in a frantic effort to escape from the ship's hold. Michael Certurane, the Italian comssioner, was sent below with some of the ship's officers to quiet the panic stricken people, but was roughly handied. Meantime the chief attention of the officers was needed to held the ship head to the seas. The passengers seen became se seasick as to be ineapable of making much disturbance, and the loose buils were rendered incapable of harm by the wine casks.

Two Dond on Bridgeport Tracks. BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Sept. 18 .-Struck by the Bay State express passing through this city, John Shannahan, a track walker, was instantly killed on the trestle at the foot of State street. He was terribly mangled. Felix Me-Govern was found dying on the railread tracks near Cornwall bridge, and it is thought that he was implicated in a burgiary near that place. McGovern died soon after he was found. The police think that he was attacked by companions during a dispute over the booty.

Major Wesendorf Dead. BLIZABETH, N. J., Sept. 18.-Major Max Wesenderf, a retired United States army officer, is dead at the Elizabeth General hospital of stemach trouble. He was born in Denstett, Germany, seventy-four years ago. Came Without Warning to Summe Resorts Near Wilmington, N. C. WILMINGTON, N. C., Sept. 18 .- For six or eight hours upward of 200 men women and children here were cut off from the mainland in imminent peril, while cottage, hotel and railroad property was damaged to the extent of from eight to ten thousand dollars by a fierce northeast storm which swept. Wrightsville beach, nine miles east of Wilmington, early in the day. The storm came without warning and hundreds of cottagers at the beach received their first intimation of danger upon awakening to find the breakers sweeping clear across the beach to the sound and rolling high up on the main land two miles beyond. A trolley car kept at the beach in case of emergency took about twenty five early risers across the sound on the trestle by which it is reached, and four other cars responded from the city to a telephone message and brought others across while the waves swept the tres-
