The Farmers' National bank has declared a quarterly dividend of two and one half cents, payable on and after October 1. This is equal to ten per cent. a year to the stockholders. A splendid showing.

Just the Name. "So this is your latest style in umbrellas?" interrogated the caller in the umbrella factory. "What do you call it?" "Why, the 'Kentucky Colonel,'" replied the manufacturer.

"And why did you select such an extraordinary name as the 'Kentucky Colonel?'" "Because it is waterproof."—Chicago Daily News.

A Situation. 'Twas a terrible time For the heroine's woes, When the blood in her veins And the water pipe froze. —N. Y. Sun.

THE NEW FROCK.

"Isn't it rather circusy?" "Circusy?" "Yes—don't you see? Bare-backed."

Always Loses. No poker party is complete Without him sitting in it; He helps to swell the Jack-pot And the other fellows win it. —Houston Post.

Feeling His Oats. George—I say, Gus, what's happened? You strut along the street as if you owned the whole city. Fallen heir to a fortune?

Gus—No, but I've been dodging my tailor for 18 months, and to-day I've got the money in my pocket to pay him.—N. Y. Weekly.

Strictly True. Editor—What do you mean by writing: "Among the prettiest girls at the Jance was Capt. Andrews?" The captain is a man.

Reporter—Yes; but he spent most of his time among the prettiest girls there.—Cassell's Journal.

Her Idea. Mr. Stubb (reading)—Maria, I see where a crowd of Scotchmen had a curling match. What in the world is that?

Mrs. Stubb—Why, they curled one another's hair, of course, you goose.—Chicago Daily News.

At the College Concert. She—Who is that fellow singing now?

He—Oh, he's a chap on the football team.

"I thought so, by the way he's mangling that song!"—Yonkers Statesman.

Illumination. Miss Jellers—Do you mean to say Gerald has taken a fancy to Millie Jodyke—that dark thing?

Miss Goodwin—Dark? You ought to see her face light up when he comes into the room!—Chicago Tribune.

Declinations by Wholesale. "That Miss Goldrick seems to be awfully popular with the young men."

"Popular is no name for it. Why, do you know, her father has actually got under a printed form for declining offers for her hand!"—Tit-Bits.

Changed. Patience—I remember she was very backward in school. Has she improved any?

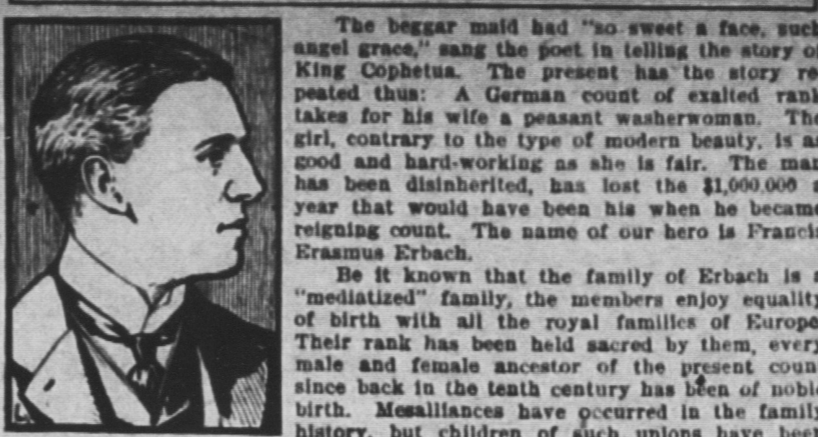

Patrice—Well, I wouldn't call it an improvement, but she is very forward now.—Yonkers Statesman.

All Ready. "Kind lady," remarked the tramp, wearily, "can you oblige me with something to eat?"

"Certainly. Go to the woodshed and take a few chops," replied the kind lady.—Cassell's.

A ROMANTIC LOVER

The beggar maid had "so sweet a face, such angel grace," sang the poet in telling the story of King Cophetua. The present has the story repeated thus: A German count of exalted rank takes for his wife a peasant washerwoman. The girl, contrary to the type of modern beauty, is as good and hard-working as she is fair. The man has been disinherited, has lost the $1,000,000 a year that would have been his when he became reigning count. The name of our hero is Francis Erasmus Erbach.

Be it known that the family of Erbach is a "meditiated" family, the members of equality of birth with all the royal families of Europe. Their rank has been held sacred by them, every male and female ancestor of the present count since back in the tenth century has been of noble birth. Misalliances have occurred in the family history, but children of such unions have been declared from the succession. Up to his eighteenth year the count who has just wedded a washerwoman, was kept in seclusion, reared in full belief in the family greatness, had dined into his ear the duties incumbent upon him as eldest son of the reigning count. He knew what happened to an Erbach that married a woman of low degree. At the age mentioned, the heir was sent to complete his education at the University of Bonn, and here learned that there were others in the world besides the Erbachs, was given a wider outlook on life, doubtless lost some reverence for Erbach traditions.

It is hard to believe the wonderful, unconquerable personality could be conquered even by mortal illness itself, that the invincible old Norwegian, after such bitter, strenuous, immensely successful struggles, must at last be laid low by the reaper. But let us not speak of death, let us speak of life and force.

Back in 1866 Ibsen said: "I will and shall have a victory some day." And when the victory came, a victory beyond his dreams, he was humbly "grateful to be understood." Ibsen is named one of the greatest literary men of the time, great poet and dramatist.

He was born at Skien, Norway, 77 years ago. German stock on his mother's side, some Danish blood from his father. In his youth he was clerk to an apothecary for awhile, and later began the study of medicine at the University of Christiania. He wrote when not at his studies, and the success of one of his productions led him to give up medicine for the drama.

Appointed stage manager at Bergen, presently he won renown in Scandinavia by his series of national dramas. Five years he served as director of the Norwegian theater at Christiania, but his management brought the theater to bankruptcy. After this failure he petitioned the stroking for the poet's pension, which was finally granted him. Embittered by the failure, by the political situation in 1864, he exiled himself from Norway, lived abroad ten years.

In 1891 he returned to Christiania, that city became his home. In 1899 a bronze statue of Ibsen was placed before the National theater; on the occasion of his seventieth birthday he received presents and greetings from all over the world.

Ibsen's dramatic work at first was romantic, then historical, then he gave the social satires, and the later psychological work. When the work "Ibsenism" is used, reference is made to the last phase.

THE FRENCH PRESIDENT

President Loubet had repeatedly refused to be considered a candidate to succeed himself; it is obviously unnecessary to say that he had been repeatedly urged to succeed himself.

Sincere regret is voiced at his retirement, on the sudden death of his predecessor the national assembly elected him on the first ballot. As a president Loubet had not been exactly a Roosevelt, but France would sorely miss him to do with a Roosevelt. He has conquered hatred and prejudice, closes his presidency with dignity and prestige.

Some newspaper man remarks that his term is ending in a blaze of glory. "Sovereigns have honored him, and the position of France, thanks to the friendly understanding with Italy and Spain, and the apparently undiminished financial strength of her thrifty population, is better than in a generation." Under his administration the republic has been strengthened, the monarchists seem to have disappeared.

A GREAT NEWSPAPER MAN

An authority on things Russian, Dr. Dillon's name has been signed to numerous recent newspaper and magazine articles of wide publicity. Dr. Dillon has lived in Russia 25 years, is married to a Russian lady, is a personal friend of many Russians of note. He is a man of rare ability and rare opportunities, eminently fitted for his high place in journalism.

Dr. Dillon is an Irishman—it would seem that nowadays to be markedly successful one must be either Jew or Irish. His education was begun in Dublin; he continued studies at various European universities. Dr. Dillon is a scholar of renown, as well as a journalist; a friend says he is by nature scholar and philosopher. And when we add that the scholar is a man of unusual physical courage, a bold adventurer, we surely have a picture of a most interesting personality.

Let us speak of Dr. Dillon as war correspondent. He visited China after the Boxer insurrection, which visited led to the conduct of the troops of the allies; and American and European was called upon to squirm. He was in France during the Dreyfus agitation. Disguised as a monk he worked his way into Crete with the insurgents, at no inconsiderable risk. He was in Spain before and during the Spanish-American war, saw Weyler and his work. The Sultan refused permission for him to go to Armenia in 1895, but he entered the country in disguise, traveled about as a Cossack officer, a native woman, a Kurd chief—observed first-hand the atrocities, gave relief where he could, sent forth reports that stirred the world. In Armenia he was poisoned once, several times barely escaped with his life.

BELOVED MARK TWAIN

Mark Twain was 70 years old the last day of November—Thanksgiving day this year. And he gave us a Thanksgiving sermon in the true Twain fashion, the three-score-and-seven arrival has not dimmed the luster of his wit or weakened the sureness of his aim. He hits as straight from the shoulder as ever, and with as hard a blow.

Mark Twain's new book, "Editorial Wild Oats," tells the story of his early wanderings from printing office to printing office; in mind's eye we see him at the case in Hannibal, at Keokuk, Muscatine, St. Louis. And then comes "Noo York." But the great city does not hold the wanderer, back again west he travels to the river his name is to immortalize. He plays pilot till the breaking out of the war; enters the confederate army, plays soldier for the short period of two weeks—in Twain fashion he explains the briefness of his service—he became overfatigued in constant round-the-world lecture trip to pay the debt of honor. Now is the unnumbered old age. Old age and Mark Twain! Banish the thought!
