Mrs. Hattie Smith of Washington, D. C., has been visiting Mrs. Emma Tillman, her sister and to day they both went to Milan to spend the day with friends.

J. B. Smith is putting down a new stone sidewalk in front of his home on Spruce street. He has lately been remodeling his house and slicking up to a considerable extent.

King Kelley, a well known character, put up at Hotel Mulligan last night. He has been at Waverly and Sayre recently, but when it became certain that he was to go into the gang at the stone pile he shook off the dust from his feet and came to Athens for cover.

CHICKEN THIEVES ACTIVE

Athens—There have been numerous deprivations of chicken thieves in town for the past few weeks and they have made some very valuable hauls. The residents in the vicinity of the furniture works have suffered considerably and a sharp lookout has been instituted and it is pretty well understood who the guilty parties are although no positive evidence has been obtained that would convict. This morning at about three o'clock, Jess Childs heard a turmoil among his chickens and hastily got up and rushed out just in time to see a man run with three of his best pullets. He took after him and the man stumbled over a wire and fell and the chickens got away from him. He chased the man as far as Main street when he got away, but he did not carry off the fowls this time. Jess has a shot gun by his bedside now and if the marauders come again they will carry something away with them that will make them regret coming.

Home of Poe's Lenore at Richmond

Places of Interest to Students of Famous Poet Still Standing in the Virginia Capital.

Richmond, Va.—Two houses stand in this city today which are of intense interest to every student of Poe. Located both recently while making a special study of Poe's life in Richmond. One is no other than the home of the "Lost Lenore" of the "Raven," the other is Sadler's restaurant, in which Poe spent his last evening in Richmond and where possibly he took the first drink which led to his death a few days later in Baltimore.

The lady who claimed that Poe told her she was the "Lenore" of the "Raven" was Miss Sarah Elmira Royster, afterward Mrs. Shelton. She was familiarly called "Poe's Lenore" to the day of her death. She was Poe's first sweetheart.

This and the sacred passion for Mrs. Jane Stith Stanard, the Helen of his beautiful lines, were the great fires of Poe's youth. He met Miss Royster in the spring of 1825, when under a special tutor he was preparing to enter the University of Virginia in February of the next year.

When Poe returned to Richmond for the last time, in the summer of 1849, Mrs. Shelton was a widow. The attachment of earlier years was renewed. Mrs. Shelton herself has given a graphic account of this first meeting. "I was ready to go to church," she says, "when a servant entered and told me that a gentleman in the parlor wished to see me. I went down and was amazed at seeing Mr. Poe. I knew him immediately. He came up to me in the most enthusiastic manner and said, 'Oh, Elmira, is it you?'"

In Pennsylvania the other day 70 people celebrated the thirteenth birthday of a horse. At any rate, that is an improvement on the Newport dog and monkey society events.

Not an Indian Word. "Calumet" supposed to be an Indian word meaning "pipe of peace," was wholly unknown among the savages. It is Norman, and signifies in general a pipe. The pipe of peace was a "ganowdoo" among the Iroquois and a "poagan" among some other tribes. The Algonkians called it "poagan" the Winnebagoes "lahueehoo" and the Dacotahs "chaidon-boopa."

Remarkable Story, Anyhow. From Seigersville, Pa., comes perhaps the most remarkable potato story of the season, and, in connection, just as remarkable a chicken story. Several days ago it stated a farmer of that vicinity, while working in a field, discovered a hen which was setting on several eggs. Investigation showed that the nest was nothing more nor less than a large potato which the fowl had pecked hollow, laid four eggs in and then began to hatch the eggs.

West Virginia Mystery. A very large house snake was killed in the county court room of the court house recently, says the Pocahontas Times. Some young ladies were working on the desk books, and on entering the room one of them was horrified to see a large snake in the middle of the floor. A number heard her scream, and the snake was soon dispatched. How the reptile could have gotten into the room, which is kept locked, is a mystery.

Domestic vs. Wild Animals. In the aggregate the value of all the wild animals in the world is trifling by comparison with the market price of the horses, cattle, swine, sheep, goats and other domesticated beasts, not to speak of the pets like dogs and cats or of poultry. The hens in the United States are probably worth more than all the wild animals in the country would sell for if they could be caught and put on the market.

Pretty English Naval Custom. A pretty little custom is observed in the English navy whenever an officer gets married. Two wreaths are hoisted in the most conspicuous manner and interlocked with them and hanging from them are colored ribbons. These hang from eight a. m. till sunset on the wedding day. The cost of the wreaths is generally subscribed by the officer's shipmates.

No Provision Made. An advertisement in the London Daily Telegraph intimates that "unless" a certain gentleman, late of Dewsbury, who left in storage household furniture with the undersigned, fails to communicate within 21 days, the same will be sold at auction." What will happen if he does not fail to communicate remains to be seen.

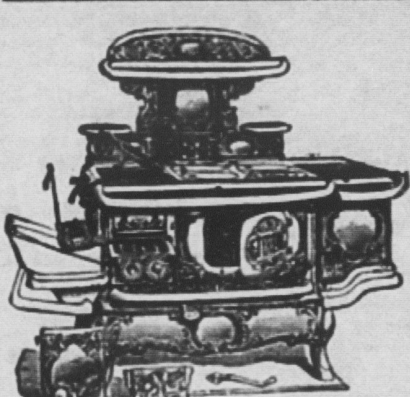

Speed and the Navy. The maneuvers, although they have not greatly added to our knowledge of tactics, have again established the importance of speed.—London Engineering.
