RING CANDIDATES EXPLAIN THINGS

Lilley Pledges His Support to the Gang Ticket—Tax Issue Ignored—Lincoln Republicans Are Soreheads

About 200 men gathered at the Packer hose rooms last evening to hear the state issues discussed by the regular Republican candidate for governor, Edwin S. Stuart of Philadelphia. Considerable trouble had been experienced in finding a man who would preside at the meeting, but at length Burgess Wm. Cross consented to act in that capacity. In his speech introducing the gubernatorial aspirant he lauded the grand old party, and referred to Mr. Stuart as the only candidate now running for the highest office in the state who was a worthy exponent of its principles.

Mr. Stuart said that he was under no obligations to anyone to do any acts other than to carry out the oath of office. That he was the candidate of the Republican party from a sense of duty and not because of any personal desires. He called attention to the laws that had been passed by the last session of the legislature and laid special emphasis on the new primary election law, the personal registration law, and the corrupt practice act that required every candidate to file an itemized statement of his election expenses, and make affidavit to the same. He dilated upon the infamy of a man who debauches the ballot, and said that he was the greatest criminal in the state. He said that he had been nominated on a platform promising reforms and that he would carry it out to the letter and allow no usurpation. He said that the platform promised two cent passenger rates; a bill permitting freight to be carried on trolley cars; and to create a railroad commission to look after and see that the railroads obeyed the law. He said that corporations, as well as people, had rights; that he did not believe in destroying, but rather in regulating them. Speaking of the great surplus of $13,000,000 that now lies in the state treasury, he said that it should be appropriated for purposes that would confer the greatest benefit on the people; that hospitals for the insane, weak minded and consumptives were worthy objects; he also thought that a large share should go for the purpose of building good roads throughout the state. Spoke of the unprecedented prosperity of the United States and said that it was due to the far-reaching policy and wise legislation of the Republican party. Said that any change in the tariff should be made by that organization, and in order to prevent a revision and consequent widespread misery it is necessary to return Republicans to the house of representatives. Said that the man who was returned must be a firm believer in every measure advocated by President Roosevelt. Told the voters that the only way for this district to carry out its share of the program was to return Hon. Mial E. Lilley to the national congress; that if Lilley were returned it meant a vote for Joseph Cannon for speaker and a consequent organization of the house that would insure a continuance of Republican principles. Referring to the new state capitol building, he said that it was a magnificent structure and worthy of the state; that he did not know whether there had been any stealing in connection with it or not, but if elected he would investigate thoroughly and if any man had been guilty of criminal acts in regard to the building then he would see that he received the punishment that his acts merited, and that no man had the power to prevent him from carrying out what he promised. He said that personally it was immaterial whether he was elected or not; that he was fighting on behalf of the G. O. P., for the purpose of continuing the general prosperity and for the triumph of the principles of good government.

The second speaker was Robert J. Young of Tioga county, candidate for auditor general. He said that in the past there had been a sinister element and abuses in the Republican party, but a party of insurgents, of which he was one of the foremost, had succeeded in weeding them all out, and now the party was practically purified. That ample proof of this statement was to be found in the progressive and excellent laws that had been passed by the last special session. He said that the Lincoln party was made up of three classes: The first were a number of good Republicans who had been misled, and whom he would be glad to welcome back into the fold; the second element consisted of a lot of disappointed office seekers who had been disappointed while looking for some favors from the party and were sore about it; the third were those who had been elevated to some small position, who were not too clean, but hoped to rehabilitate themselves by getting into what seemed to them the floodtide of public sentiment.

The last speaker was General Thomas J. Stewart of Montgomery county. He is not a candidate. He was a very pleasing speaker and kept his auditors in a happy state of mind by his humor. He wanted all the old party men to gather around the altar of Republicanism and commune together. He dilated upon the past achievements of the party, of its great men, and urged all Republicans to gather around the standard and fight for the present nominees of that organization.

Mr. Shaffer of Philadelphia spoke next and confined himself to the past doings and achievements of the party, touching on the great national prosperity.

The Hon. Mial E. Lilley was then introduced. He said that he was proud to stand on the platform with the gentlemen present, who were the candidates of the party. He spoke of their past record, and said that he stood for the whole ticket without any reservation. He said: "I am for the whole ticket and I want it to be known throughout the length and breadth of the county."

LILLEY AND KILROW

(New Milford Advertiser)

Every decent man in this Congressional district is unutterably disgusted by the acts of Mial E. Lilley of Bradford county, who is seeking by every means, fair or foul, to be again placed in running for another term in Congress.

Lilley, himself, however, isn't generally considered wholly responsible for the hatching of all the flim-flam methods attempted in his behalf, for it is generally understood that Tommy Kilrow has once more floated to the surface and has been employed by Lilley to conduct the latter's canvass. That explains the recent monkey-work at the Montrose convention as well as the attempt to duplicate it in the Lincoln-Republican conference, and it is evidently worthy of Lilley's trainer.

Mial E. Lilley was, by some mischance, elected to serve this district in Congress, but, although he likes the position, the people of the district evidently are of the opinion that he isn't nearly large enough to properly occupy the chair. This undoubtedly explains his reason for employing Kilrow to sneak him into the nomination, anyhow, if possible, and it is a great compliment to Tom's peculiar genius. If that one act isn't sufficient to disgust every man in this district, it is queer.

That Lilley, who seeks again to misrepresent this district, has submitted his cause to Tom Kilrow, is most astonishing to people.

When a person asks for political preferment or other recognition by the people, it is generally supposed that he has some real or implied fitness which may appeal to the voters but when a Congressman takes unto his bosom as his personal friend and advisor Tom Kilrow, that settles his hash in this district. The voters, as a class, are not fools by any means.

Hon. Mial E. Lilley is now asking a long suffering constituency to return him—figure head that he has proven—to Congress and he proposes to "get there" whether they want him or not, by the aid of his newly found friend, Tommy. And who is Tommy? The court records of this county together with the statute of limitations, can give some information, and at about that time he flared upon the public as a political traitor, intriguer, and absorber of fool politicians' cash. Perhaps the people of Bradford county may be interested in looking up his record. It isn't necessary in this county. Yet he has been chosen by Mial E. Lilley as his champion and advisor.

The Republican party has been free with the boast that it was the party of "honesty, morality, etc.," at least in this district, but of late the cover seems to have been somewhat tilted. If the party has been really acquainted with some people whom it has "delighted to honor," and when Mial E. Lilley chooses Tom Kilrow as his preceptor and guide, it appears to most people that he is in sore straits. Without true Republican friends to land him in his desired position, he must resort to schemes for which Kilrow is notorious, and he thereby has placed the last straw upon the elephant's back.

A glance at the accounts in the newspapers of the manner in which he was attempted to hoodoo the Lincoln-Republican conference in Bradford county, when they attempted to foist Lilley upon that party as its nominee for Congress, is a simple trick, but it failed them as was evidenced by the nomination for Congress of Geo. W. Kipp, of Towanda, notwithstanding the lying statement of the Lilley gang, that the "conference had endorsed Lilley."

It is an old and true saying that "a man is known by the company he keeps." That is when he knows his company. Mial Lilley does know his manager—knows him thoroughly. Don't you believe it? If he doesn't, perhaps he could gain some information by asking ex-Congressman C. F. Wright, Chas. Pratt, and other lesser political lights, who have had the misfortune to intimately form his acquaintance, and who, after getting wise to his methods, simply turned him down. Tom, also had a little sad experience, when, after being concerned in the publication of a malicious libel against people who would no longer "give milk," he saved himself great personal discomfort by publicly recanting. And that's the chap who is chaperoning a nice Congressman of this district. When a man seeks such aid, his cause must be most awfully sick.

Kilrow has, for some time at least, since the occurrence just referred to, been supposed to be politically defunct his epitaph being the humiliating confession which he was obliged to make. But Tommy "is himself again," and to his resurrection. This simply indicates that he must be in sad need of assistance of any old sort. It's good Lord, anybody, just now.

His record in the responsible position in which he was mistakenly placed, a position which is usually given men of brains and ability to use them, is one large, elegant opaque blank. Do you wish more of that kind of service?

The space in this article donated to Lilley's re-man, Kilrow, would not be needed in Susquehanna county were the latter so well known, but it would do the people of Bradford, Wayne and Wyoming good to look up the record of this supposed-to-be-maker of the Congressman. As we previously remarked, "a man is known by the company he keeps," and Mial E. Lilley will have the permission of the people of this district to stay in and enjoy that company instead of longer occupying floor space in the National Legislature. A Susquehanna Republican.
