D. C. Williams of Danville Took Nome ination Seriously and Won Out. Williams is a slater by occupation, and "Di. Williams, the slater," was the slogan of his campaign.

Opposed to him was Calvin Shultz, a prosperous West Hemlock township farmer, who made a vigorous campaign. Every one said it was easy for Shultz, but Williams refused to give up and, with the butt of a cigar always in his mouth, buttonholed every voter in the county, going particularly after the workingman's vote and getting it. He carried every ward in Danville, and in his home ward, the Second, he had a plurality of 207 votes, the largest greatly enjoying the trip. A message Sheshequin, drove to Athens yesplurality ever given a candidate. When the ballots were counted it was found that Williams had secured 1,597 votes against 1,138 for Shultz.
