FALSEHOODS, SAYS HEARST.

Denies Reported Statement Regarding ST. LOUIS, Nov. 19.—The following statement was given out by William H. Hearst:

The interviews that appeared in the St. Louis morning papers were absurdly false from beginning to end, but there is only one point that is important enough to require a specific denial. The Globe-Democrat says: "As to the possibility of Bryan receiving the Democratic nomination for president in 1908, Hearst simply replied that he was not a clairvoyant. 'I do not admit, mind you,' he said, 'that Bryan even figures as a possibility two years hence.'"

I did not say one word of this statement. I said simply that I hoped Mr. Bryan would be nominated and elected, but that no one could tell what would happen two years from now.

The falsehoods that are told about me personally I do not mind, but I insist this reference to Mr. Bryan shall be corrected, as I would not like Mr. Bryan or his friends to think that I would make a statement that is both unfriendly and unwarranted.

Used Human Bones as Clubs.

CHICAGO, Nov. 19.—Human bones were used as cudgels and ossified arms and legs swung by medical students played the star part as binderguns in a arena with the dental students on the football field at Northwestern university here when the football teams of the dental and medical departments of the institution met at their annual game. Between the halves the friends of the teams clashed. Each dental student carried a grotesque papier mache cane, which they wielded with effect on the "medics." When the medical students saw their opponents rushing toward them they suddenly drew forth from under their overcoats leg and arm bones tied with red and purple ribbons, and with these clubs they smashed the heads of the invaders unmercifully. The dental students were soon put to flight.

Brought a Treasonable Convict.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—On board the British four masted bark Keutmere, which arrived from Loureco Marquer, Africa, was Karl Kessler, aged fifty. Kessler after serving eleven years in prison at Loureco was sent on board the Keutmere by the German consul to work his passage to East London, but on arrival at the latter port the authorities refused to permit Kessler to land, consequently Captain Burch was obliged to bring him to this port. Kessler caused no trouble while on board the ship during the voyage, but while at East London he threatened to set fire to the vessel if he was not permitted to land. He was placed in irons until the United States immigration authorities decide as to whether he can be landed or not.

Two Dead in Hotel Fire.

GOLDFIELD, Nev., Nov. 19.—The dead in the fire at the Hotel Goldfield has narrowed down to two. Disembodied bodies were found in the debris, which made it appear that there were many dead. The known dead are A. H. Heber of Los Angeles, Cal., and Judge J. M. Ellis of Denver. The head of the corpse supposed to be that of Ellis was dismembered from the trunk and only a few bones remained. Many were injured by jumping from the second and third stories, as the big wooden building was enveloped so quickly that there was no other means of escape.

To Civilize the Red Man.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—The annual report of Francis E. Leupp, commissioner of Indian affairs, has been made public. Mr. Leupp says no congressional act has passed so much legislation of vital importance to the Indian as the last one. To promote the training of the Indian in the culture of sugar beets and to secure legislation looking to an equitable division of tribal funds, thereby making the red man a free and independent citizen, are the two projects for which the commissioner is working hardest as future accomplishments.

Wellman at New York.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—Walter Wellman, the arctic explorer, who is planning a dash to the north pole in an airship, arrived from Havre on the steamer La Savoie. Mr. Wellman said he would return to Paris in three weeks to forward the completion of his plans. He said: "We have our own plant and our own engineer now and expect to accomplish more this time. The last time our work was let out at contract, and they finished the work too late in the season."

Jim Dawson's Coon

By M. W. L. KINER

Jim Dawson, rare and raw, in the depths of Arkansas, could teach infant 'coons and 'possums queerest tricks you ever saw. "Why," said Uncle Ned, "Jim's a 'possum that plays dead!" Uncle's lungs were like to leave him as he tore off that "haw-haw!"

Uncle's store was in the woods, and he swapt all sorts of goods, whisky, calico, molasses, and the various breakfast foods, to the natives for the produce of the nearby neighborhoods. Uncle said: "In Illinois, where you lately came from, boy, hunters jump with joy to capture coons no bigger than a toy; but down here among the pines, in the dark, a 'coon's eye shines with a glow a good deal bigger than whole 'coons in Illinois."

Then Jim Dawson through the door dragged a 'coonskin on the floor, bigger than the biggest 'coonskin I had ever seen before. It was of a laprobe size, and I thought they wasn't lies that Uncle Ned had told to me about the critter's eyes. Then they dickered for the skin, and of all the dust and dirt! Jim maintained a skin like that, clean of any meat and fat, for the parlor of a prince could not be made into a mat Uncle handed Jim a tenner, saying, "Throw it in the bin."

Jim goes grinning with his ten to some forest-hidden den, I suppose, for in an hour he comes trilling back again, dragging by the ten-tinged tail, like a bucket by the ball, a 'coonakin long enough to hide an ordinary rail, from the till, with a frown upon his features like it was against his will. Dawson dragged in skins all day. Uncle Ned'd stand and pay maroon-backed bills to Dawson, wondering when the bin'd fill.

Dawson quit at dusk. "Oh, well," Uncle said, "I ought to sell them three parties at a profit; though this has a 'coonakin worth. And the skin of the dicker doesn't suit me very well." With a gruesome, ghastly grin, Uncle Ned went to the bin. It was built like a back kitchen, and had little windows in. May I never live to listen to another such a din!

"Where's that dirt-defyin'-Jim? Gimme jist an ax and him! Gimme 40 feet o' clothedline and an overhangin'

"What's the Trouble, Uncle Ned?"

Hmb! Gimme jist a place to stan' on and a ramrod for to ram on forty million billion buckshot in a double-barreled cannon!"

"What's the trouble, Uncle Ned?" soothingly I went and said. He had fell across a barrel and was standing on his head, and the flour from the barrel made him whiter than the dead.

"'Twas a live coon! See the widders! To jump out there's nothin' hidder! See the grass where he alighted—claws has tore it all to fenders! May Jim Dawson light in hades on a trillion tons o' cinders!"

Armed with ax and club and poker Uncle sought the 'coonskin broker, and his trail through the timber smoked some like a steamboat smoker when the coal and rozzum riots at the stirring of the stoker.

Such skin-games deeply scorning I departed without warning. At home I got this telegram: "He'd be a limb a-dorning; but it was an Arkansaser joke—he paid it back next morning!"—Kansas City Star.
