CARUSO DENIES INSULT.

Detective Cain Declares He Will Prove Case Against Tenor. NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Pale and trembling, every vestige of his usual aggressive manner missing, Enrico Caruso, in the office of Heinrich Conrad, in the Metropolitan Opera House, admitted that he might have unconsciously brushed up against Mrs. Graham in the monkey house in Central park on Friday.

"It is quite possible that I may have unconsciously brushed up against some one while watching the monkeys," he said, "but that I deliberately insulted and annoyed a woman is false. I had both hands in my pockets and held a cane under my arm. I was not arrested until after I had left the house."

Caruso denied the statements made by the police that when he was taken to the station house he got down on his knees and begged to be released. He stated also that no attempt had been made to blackmail him.

Herr Conrad issued a formal statement in behalf of Caruso, in which the latter asserts his entire innocence of the charges and his indignation of the outrage.

"Knowing Caruso's propensities for fooling," said Director Conrad, "I thought that perhaps he may have been fooling with some woman in pure fun. But he did not do that. Caruso does not have to go to the monkey house to make acquaintances."

Mrs. Hannah Graham will positively be in court tomorrow to corroborate my testimony against Caruso," said Detective Cain, who arrested the celebrated grand opera tenor.

The detective further added: "Yes, there will be other witnesses. We don't make an arrest of this kind unless we've got a good case against the defendant. We've got the goods on Caruso, all right."

Joseph Cunningham, the bear keeper in Central park, corroborates Cain's story of misconduct on Caruso's part last December, which led to the tenor being kicked out of the monkey house.

FATED BIG CITIES.

Twenty-nine of Our Largest Centers Doomed by Prophet Stevens.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—That twenty-nine of the largest American cities are to be wiped off the face of the earth within the next two years is the startling prophecy made by Edward Scribner Stevens.

He is a self styled prognosticator, astrologist and royally appointed regent of King Cyrus the Great, for whom, he says, he will act until the long dead ruler revisits the world.

The list of the fated cities includes New York, Albany, Buffalo, Detroit, Lansing, Boston, Philadelphia, Washington, Richmond, Lebanon, Pa.; Pittsburg, Columbus, Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Louisville, Nashville, Muskegon, Milwaukee, Chicago, St. Louis, Hanover, Mo.; St. Joseph, Mo.; Omaha, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Denver.

Prince de Broglie to Be Citizen. NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Prince Robert de Broglie, who on Aug. 14 last married Miss Estelle Alexander, a California woman, at Chicago, has taken out his first naturalization papers preparatory to becoming a citizen of the United States. Broglie's father, Prince Amédée de Broglie, opposed his son's marriage and a few days ago filed in the Paris courts a demand for its annulment. It was claimed that, according to the laws of France, the nuptial contract was invalid because the prince's divorce from a former wife had not been approved.

Maternity. Maternity is a revolution in the existence of woman and revolution excites all the powers of life. The duties of maternity are compatible with the great thoughts, but they cannot be allied with frivolous tastes.—Madame J'Agout.

ADDS TO SKIBO LANDS

ANDREW CARNEGIE EXTENDING HOLDINGS IN SCOTLAND.

Size of Estate Doubled During Past Eight Years and American Steel King Now Monarch of 38,000 Acres.

Skibo, Scotland—Andrew Carnegie is suffering from the disease of land hunger. His great passion now is to buy up all the estates surrounding Skibo that he can.

During the eight years Carnegie has had Skibo he has doubled its size, and he is now monarch of 38,000 acres of wild highland territory, having a water frontage along Dornoch frith of 22 miles.

There are on the estate four villages, two rivers, six lakes, a forest, bird coverts, golf links, a mountain range, and a long line of hills, all owned by the American steel king. The Carnegie kingdom has a population of 1,500 farmers and crofters, all of whom are compelled to obey Carnegie's dictum because he is their landlord. Eighty ground servants are employed to keep the estate in order, besides 30 others who find work in the castle. This corps of 110 retainers includes every kind of worker, from bagpipe player and gamekeeper to electrician and carpenter.

Carnegie's most pressing desire at present is to buy the town of Dornoch, the county seat of Sutherland, which joins the Carnegie estate on the east. Dornoch has a thirteenth century cathedral, where Carnegie attends church, and a sixteenth century castle ruins.

Dornoch, however, is owned by the duke of Sutherland, one of the great Scotch noblemen, who, though he owns over a million and a quarter acres of land, declines to sell Dornoch to the American commoner. Carnegie makes repeated offers to the duke, which are periodically refused. Carnegie has spent over $1,000,000 on Skibo, and he is willing to spend as much more to get what he wants in the way of land. This is an enormous amount of money, locally, for the land itself is of very little value, only 6,000 of the 38,000 acres on the Skibo estate being arable. It is off the beaten tourist track, and though it is only 50 miles from the nearest large town, Inverness, it

Skibo Castle. takes Carnegie four hours to get there.

After a railroad ride he takes a trap to Melkie ferry, an antiquated method of crossing the Dornoch frith, made in a leaky rowboat with a small sail. The ferry lands at a dilapidated pier at Skibo, and then Carnegie is driven a mile and a half to his castle through woodland deep with foliage, the road here and there passing along a lake or a stream.

Skibo castle has a commanding position on a high hill, overlooking a forest of trees in one direction, a flat meadow in another, with a mountain range in the background. It is one of the most beautiful castles in Great Britain. Carnegie has been enlarging constantly, until now it is three times the size it was when he bought it. The castle has 77 rooms for the use of Mr. and Mrs. Carnegie and their little daughter, including 25 bedrooms and six reception rooms. So many of them are tucked in corners that Carnegie has been known to be lost in his own house. The castle is four stories high.

The grounds about the castle require the care of 11 gardeners working all the time. There are three conservatories and seven flower beds to be looked after, besides three gardens where berries and vegetables are grown. Creepers cover all masonry in the gardens, and hedges of laurel serve as fences. All the vegetables eaten at the castle are grown on the estate. Carnegie also has his own cows and sheep. He kills his own mutton, but buys his beef.

The forest preserves for hunting and the fields for bird shooting are so extensive that Carnegie has to employ ten gamekeepers to keep off poachers. On the estate are grouse, partridges pheasants, snipe, woodcock, hares, stags, fallow bucks and roe deer.

Guarding Against Toothache. Those who get an attack of toothache by passing from heat to cold or cold to heat, may try the following plan: Before going into the cold, rinse the mouth with a little tepid water; then with water slightly colder, and finally with quite cold water. Before going into a hot room rinse with hot water.

A Limit to It. "Economizing, are they? You surprise me! I understood they were simply rolling in wealth." "Well, that may be true, but I believe they have to be careful not to roll too far."

Accounted For. Bacon—How gum he always looks. Doesn't he ever try to look on the bright side of things? Egbert—Oh, yes, he tries to; but, you see, he's fearfully cross-eyed!—Yonkers Statesman.

Might Have Known Better. "How did you come to propose to me?" asked the widow, coyly. "I didn't come to propose to you," replied her visitor, dazedly; "I came merely to spend the evening."—Houston Post.
