STRIKE RIOT IN HAMILTON.

Soldiers and Police in Battle With Mob of Angry Street Car Men. HAMILTON, Ont., Nov. 26.—Scores of persons were injured in collisions between rioters and the police and soldiers here during the night. Several street cars were demolished by the striking street car men and their sympathizers. Sheriff Middleton was notified by the mayor and read the riot act, which called on the mob to disperse, and made every able-bodied citizen amenable to police duty. He notified Captain Ogilvie that the aid of troops was necessary to maintain order.

The streets were strewn with debris from the broken cars, which the militia, infantry and cavalry charged the crowds with fixed bayonets and drawn swords. Never in Hamilton's history were such scenes of disorder and lawlessness seen as were enacted on the principal streets of the city. Scores of rioters, sympathizers with the striking street car men, felt the weight of policemen's night sticks and the edges of the soldiers' swords in desperate conflicts in James and King streets. At a late hour street cars were running at intervals under heavy guard, but they carried no passengers and continued to be targets for fusillades of stones and bricks from side streets and alleys.

TROUBLED CUBA.

Rural Guards After Armed Deprived in Island Provinces. HAVANA, Nov. 26.—Colonel Chase of the Fifteenth cavalry corps reports from Cienfuegos that rural guards are pursuing an armed band which appeared at La Josefa sugar estate and demanded arms. When none were forthcoming the band took five horses. Captain Harleo, commanding at Palmira, wires that a band of twenty-five, led by a man named Callado, mounted and with carbines, revolvers and machetes, left Palmira threatening to attack the town. Captain Harleo ordered that the streets be patrolled and that groups of citizens loitering be dispersed. The mayor of Palmira has a guard on the city hall, and soldiers continue to patrol the town. Lieutenant Hughes at Homiguerra reports that a band of thirty-five men has stolen horses near the Soledad plantation and has looted a store. A troop of rural guards is scouting for the band.

Couple Found Dead in Bed. TOLEDO, O., Nov. 26.—Mr. and Mrs. James Scott Mitchell of Salem, Mass., were found dead in bed in a rooming house at Bellevue, east of here. When their room was entered a strong odor of formaldehyde gas was noticed. Coroner Vermilya rendered a verdict of double suicide. Later investigation, however, revealed facts which tended to show that Mitchell drugged his wife and caused her death and then committed suicide by the same means.

Missing Boy's Body Found. LANCASTER, N. H., Nov. 26.—The body of Phillip Courroy, the sixteen-year-old boy who strayed away from a camp in the woods, where he had been with a companion named Frank Whitney two weeks ago, was found two miles from the camp with a gunshot wound in the left breast. At first it was thought that Courroy was the victim of foul play. The boy was a cripple and as his gun was found near the body it is now believed that he used the weapon as a cane and that he was shot through its accidental discharge.

So far the bodies have not been recovered.

False Alarm at Pittsburg Hospital. PITTSBURG, Nov. 26.—All the available fire apparatus in the center of the city was called to the Mercy hospital last night by an alarm from the private box of that institution. When the locality became known crowds began to flock to the hospital, but the fire was an insignificant one, being in the Magee pathological building. The fire was extinguished, with a loss of $10, and was caused by a germ incubator exploding.

"BRER STEER" PURSUES DECK, HAND IN AN EXCITING SWIM

Chases Man from Deck of a Delaware River Ferry—Boat Pursues Bull—Ferry Takes After Boat—Race Ends Half Mile, with Bull a Close Second.

Philadelphia.—A big steer, a deck hand, a row boat manned by six men and a steamboat had a thrilling pursuit race over a half mile course in the Delaware River, opposite Chester, the other morning. The steer pursued the deck hand, who fortunately was a good swimmer. The rowboat went after the bull, and the steamboat naturally trailed along behind. It was lucky for the deck hand in the river that the men in the boat overtook the bull before it overtook him. The steamboat was the Major Reynolds, which makes daily trips between this city and Salem, N. J., and it started its journey up the river with the steer, the rowboat and the deck hand aboard. The bull was on the freight deck, with several stout hawsers about his horns and legs. Whether the animal suffered from the heat or disliked the prospect of leaving the green fields of South Jersey for the hot city is not known. At any rate, the steer, with a tons of his powerful head, snapped the ropes that held him and started on the rampage.

The bull charged across the deck and the deck hands scattered. They hid behind the water barrels and mounds of merchandise on the deck. The steer advanced toward them, and the deck hands jumped to their feet and beat it to the engine room. They had barely time to slam the door in the animal's nose. One of the deck hands was unable to reach the engine room. He started to run across the deck. The bull saw him and followed. The frightened deck hand saw the bull at his heels, so without hesitating he dived over the side of the vessel into the river. The bull kept right on after the man into the river. Fortunately the deck hand was a good swimmer, and he started up the river with the tide. The mad steer kept going, too.

The Maj. Reynolds slowed up and followed slowly after the man and the bull. The captain saw that the animal was gaining so he ordered six of the crew into a rowboat to overtake the bull. The men soon had the boat in the river and they went after the bull, rowing forty strokes a minute. At the end of the quarter mile, the deck hand was about ten yards ahead of the bull, which led the rowboat by twenty yards with the Major Reynolds just behind. The men in the boat saw the bull closing up the gap between him and the deck hand and they increased their stroke to forty-three. Gradually they drew up on the animal. While four of the men kept at the oars two of them tried to lasso the bull. Every time they cast their rope the bull shook his head and the lasso slipped from his horns. The swimming deck hand was getting tired and the

The Steer Swam Close to His Wake. bull was almost on top of him. Finally at the end of a half mile, one of the lassos succeeded in ringing the steer's horns and the animal was brought to a stop with a jerk.

The problem now was to get the animal aboard the boat. When the Reynolds came up, the captain ordered the heavy freight gangplank to be slid into the water. Meanwhile, the deck hand, almost exhausted from his long and exciting swim, managed to get aboard the steamboat. As the gangplank slid into the water, the ropes about the animal's neck were reinforced by several stout cables.

These cables were fastened to a steam winch on the deck. At a given signal the engines were started and the snorting, kicking bull was dragged up the gangplank on to the deck where the deck hands pounced upon him and tied him with a dozen ropes.
