"All the news that's fit to print"

FRIDAY NOVEMBER 30, 1906.

The Silent One Heard From.

"And you say you did not give this interview which appears in today's paper to my reporter?" asked the newspaper man.

"That is precisely what I say," replied the indignant caller.

"Why, my reporter said he called at your office and talked for four hours with somebody."

"Oh, that was my silent partner,"—Yonkers Statesman.

So Do We All. "There are some disadvantages in being a millionaire."

"For instance?"

"Well, millionaires are continually getting letters threatening them with all sorts of awful fates unless they immediately pay the writers large sums of money."

"That's nothing. I get just such letters every month,"—Cleveland Leader.

He Didn't Start It. The Beak—Defendant asserts that you provoked the assault by throwing a doubt upon his veracity.

The Prosecutor—"Tain't true, sir. It was 'im wot done the throwing. 'You're a bloomin' liar," was all I sez, sir, and with that he ups with a big lump of brick and chucks it slap at my 'ead."

Expected of Him. Mr. Henpeck laughs uproariously at his wife's jokes, and I can't for the life of me see any point to them.

"Why, I can see why he laughs every time."

"You can?"

"Yes; he laughs because he is Mrs. Henpeck's husband,"—Houston Post.

A Good Excuse. Sweet Little Innocent—"Do you think it wrong for a woman to wear feathers?"

Spooner—"That depends. Sweet Little Innocent—What on?"

Spooner—"On the woman. Now you, for instance, are a little duck; so you of course can wear them."

Consolation. "I fear I shall not be able to attract much attention," said the new congressman.

"Don't worry," answered Senator Borghum, "in this era of accusations and investigations it is sometimes a luxury not to be noticed,"—Washington Star.

Also a Reformer. "Dey're sendin' a lot o' grafters to jail," remarked Meandering Mike.

"I'm glad of it," answered Plodding Pete. "If dis high-class patronage keeps comin' in maybe de wardens will wuke up an improve de accommodations,"—Washington Star.

The Iron Man on the Crossing

"It got on my nerves, I will admit," said Mr. Stogily, "and also it irritated me personally to have the man in the auto just honk! honk! at me as he came rushing for the crossing, putting it up to me to hustle to get out of his way; it made me nervous to have to jump like that, and it irritated me to have anybody treat me with such utter and complete contempt."

"Moreover, as I understand it, the pedestrian has the right of way on a crossing, and it is the vehicle that should give way to him, not he to the vehicle. But here were men who were depriving me of my should be inalienable rights absolutely, and not only so, but doing this with the utmost rudeness and ill manners, giving no more thought or consideration to me than they would to a squeaking pig crossing their course, not considering me as a person at all, but simply honk honking to me to get out of the way, to skip, jump, skidoo."

"It really was disturbing, and this so wrought upon me that it came to seem that it would be wholly right to employ any means in retaliation."

"I have a friend, an ingenious and resourceful friend, who makes it his business to build working models for inventors from plans, or rude models submitted, or, as he sometimes does, simply from ideas; and not infrequently he supplies missing links; he breathes the breath of life into machines that without his help would never have moved. He is the inventor's friend, this friend of mine and to him I went with an idea, with full confidence that he could bring it into being—which he did.

"The idea was for a mechanically actuated iron man which could be made to move along over a street crossing, and this idea he wrought out with entire success. He made the figure that of a man of only ordinary stature, but of decidedly portly build, that of a man who would naturally walk with his feet somewhat apart—this to give the figure a broad and stable base on the ground—and would walk slowly."

"We propped up the floor of my friend's laboratory from underneath and tried the figure there and it worked perfectly. How much the iron man weighed I don't know, because we never weighed it; but it must have been 17 tons, at least."

"Running through that part of the town in which I dwell is a broad avenue much frequented by automobiles, and on this avenue there is one particular crossing, customarily taken by me, from which, often, to escape detection, I have been obliged to jump and flee. Near the close of one bright summer's day we brought the iron man, suitably clad, along and stood him up at one end of this crossing and faced him right and set him going slowly over."

"Of course there was a chance that he would miss all the autos or that the autos would all miss him, and then it would have been all for nothing, for we couldn't stay there and repeat indefinitely. It didn't turn out so, however, though the figure was half way over before anything happened. Then something did happen."

"Coming bounding down the avenue there was a bright red runabout with a battleship sized horn, now honk, honking for the fat man on the crossing to skip, skip along, and keeping coming full tilt straight at him, never doubting that he would jump in time. But this man wasn't a jumper, and the next instant the little red auto was upon him, with results amazing."

"The fat man wasn't smashed, destroyed, annihilated by the collision; he wasn't even upset by it, but the little red auto with the big horn, coming at him full and square, and spilling out the two men that had been in it, as it rose, rode up his side when it hit him, and fell over back from him a wreck."

"I guess there was something doing there, don't you think, and—what was a tribute, this, to the skill and solid workmanship of my friend the builder—the shock didn't even disarrange the machinery of the iron man who, as the red auto went to smash, walked steadily on, quite calm and undisturbed."

"A greater shock was to come for the iron man, one under which he did go down at last; though even as he lay fallen he wrought dire destruction on the big machine that bowled him over."

"This was a giant automobile that was coming booming down the avenue a little to the right of the little red auto and not very far behind it, with its horn hoarsely hooting; and while yet the iron man had advanced scarcely ten feet further in his calm, untrifled progress this giant machine was upon him with an irresistible shock, and down he went; but as the great auto shot on forward over his prostrate form his hard feet and hands and elbows caught in and seemed to loosen up every part of its machinery, for as it still shot forward it dropped, along, carbureters and commutators, and spark plugs and cranks, and cylinders and tanks, a line of automobile junk stretching scattering for a block, to where the bare body of the machine finally rested, with its dazed owner staring back wildly."

"Not much to be joyful over, this, you say? Perhaps so; still, it soothes me some,"—N. Y. Sun.

Value of Bread as Food. An illustration of the marvelous value of bread as a food is given as follows: "One pound of beef is only about half as valuable as a source of energy as an equal quantity of cheese, while a given weight of bread yields a third more energy than its equivalent in beef."

Horses for Sausage Meat. Nine thousand three hundred and ninety-four live horses were exported from London last year, going mainly to Belgium, and mostly destined to take the form of sausage.

Nasty. Estelle—I said a word last night that made Clarence the happiest man on earth.

Eileen—Why, I didn't know you were going to refuse him.—Cleveland Leader.

Open to Conviction. "Do you believe in the reincarnation?" asked the mystical woman.

"I don't know," answered the man who weighs his opinions; "I have never seen it tried,"—Washington Star.

Had To. Jimson—Well, well! That's the first time I ever saw you give a woman your seat in a crowded car.

Jayson—Not so loud, please. That's our cook.—Cleveland Leader.

A Give Away. "Do you think she is very old?"

"Yes, awfully. I heard her speak of 'swingin' on the gate' when she was a little girl. It's a long time since fences,"—Detroit Free Press.

Happy Days. Estelle—Clarence, just think of it! Five weeks from to-day and we will be married.

Clarence—Well, let's be happy while we may.—Tit-Bits.

Cruel. Young Mother—Oh, Mr. Bacheller, you must see my little baby. He's such a funny little fellow.

Bachelor—Well, Nature will have her little joke.—Puck.

His Chance. Mrs. Jawback—John, wake up! You are talking in your sleep.

Mr. Jawback—Lemme 'one. It's the only chance I ever get, ain't it?—Cleveland Leader.

At the Concert. Patience—That long-haired man with the diamonds at the piano, I just heard started life as a poor musician.

Patrice—Well, he's that yet.—Yonkers Statesman.

Perfectly Simple. "Your language is very simple."

"Yes."

"Yes, you say when a fighter is all in it is easy to put him out."—Houston Post.

Not Single. He—How many sisters have you got? She—Two.

"Are they single?"

"No, they're twins,"—Yonkers Statesman.

One Explanation. "Did you ever notice that you seldom find a woman who stutters when she talks?"

"That's so. I wonder why?"

"I suppose they haven't got time,"—Cleveland Leader.

MR. ROGERS SAYS HE WILL DO THINGS

Claims That He Will Spend $100,000 Here but Hasn't Got the Cash and Plans Seem Indefinite

Waverly—G. Tracy Rogers of Binghamton, President of the W. S. & A. Traction Co. was in Waverly last Wednesday and he was chock full of plans for the benefit of this village. He stated that he had given up the idea of having the track taken up on Chemung street for a time at least and that no further effort would be made in that direction until it was found whether the newly adopted method of operating the cars on Clinton Ave. and Chemung street, was satisfactory or not.

He then revealed to those with whom he came in contact that he had decided to spend the sum of $100,000 on improvements in this vicinity, and that $25,000 of this would go toward a park to be located at Waverly for the benefit of the Waverly people. When asked whether he actually had the $25,000 to be used for the park he replied that he did not have the cash but he had decided to spend that amount for that purpose. He stated further that the matter was in the hands of his New York friends and would no doubt come out as he wished.

When asked where he intended to locate the pond he did not seem to know exactly, but said that there were three places in sight; that Pempton's pond was one, although that might not be the place chosen. When asked where the other places were he said that they were situated somewhere in the valley in this vicinity.

When asked if he was not mere talking in this manner for the purpose of turning the public sentiment of the village in his favor in preparation for the coming injunction suit, he replied that that was his purpose, and that he would get it too. He stated that he knew how to get the people with him in his plans and that in the end they would be on his side.

It may be that he can win the people of Waverly, but in the past they have shown aptitude for making up their own minds on any public question, and it is not likely that they will delegate that privilege in this particular instance, and if Mr. Rogers wishes to win their consent to his plans he will have to show them something tangible in return for the benefits conferred
