SATURDAY DECEMBER 1, 1906

Looking for Trouble.

She—Where will we stop for dinner, dear, if we go off in the automobile?

He—Oh, we had better take our dinner along, and we'll eat wherever we happen to stop.—Yonkers Statesman.

Corrected.

Gebhart—I suppose he is breathlessly awaiting the possible outcome of that will-contest?

Carson—More likely breathlessly awaiting the possible income.—Judge.

His Last Words.

A girl in an automobile.

Ran down an old man with a squelch.

When they picked up the pieces.

He said: "Excuse me, please."

You don't know how funny I lie.—Houston Post.

IN POSITION TO BE OVERLOOKED

That's rather a long nose you've got, isn't it? Have you never noticed it?

"Yes; but I generally manage to overlook it."

Dead Eggs.

Yeast—Did you ever try to dye eggs?

Crimsonbeak—No, I never did; but I've tried 'em after they were dead.—Yonkers Statesman.

An Evidence of Disregard.

He seems to be very fond of music," said an auditor.

"He isn't," answered Miss Cayenne, "or he wouldn't try to sing"—Washington Star.

He Knew.

Teacher—How many eggs are there in a dozen?

Grocer's Boy—Five good ones, five fair ones and two bad ones.—Cleveland Leader.

Chronic with Him.

Attorney for the Defense—Have you ever been cross-examined before?

The Witness—Have I? I'm a married man.—Life.

In Peace, as It Were.

A London doctor says every man should have a silent hour at home each day. There are men who will lean to the opinion that it would be easier to have their silent hours away from home.

By Tunnel to Ireland.

Although little is said nowadays of a tunnel under the Irish sea, yet it is not impossible that at some future date this project, which has been so much canvassed, will yet assume tangible form.

The Prophecy of the Fall.

The message of the fall is no threatening over the dying year, but a glad prophecy of the renewed life which is to come.—Martha Beckes Flat.

FINDS TROUSERS, NOT LINGERIE, IN SUITCASE

Mischievous Youths Play Joke on Bride's Sister, Just Back From Wedding.

Norristown, Pa.—"Ugh! trousers, and other men's clothing!" exclaimed pretty Lillian Bergey of Bridgeport, as she opened what she supposed was her own suitcase to take out some wedding cake, lingerie, etc., upon returning from her sister's wedding at Reading.

Thereby hangs an interesting story, which was brought out at a county commissioners' meeting. A suitcase, containing wedding cake, woman's finery, etc., had been turned over to the commissioners by William Webster, watchman on the bridge between here and Bridgeport.

"You pore young one!" exclaimed the woman in horror-stricken tones. "How in the name of massy did you come to do that? Does it hurt you, Johnny?"

"Naw," replied the freckled boy, contemptuously. "Ain't nothin' to hurt. You might get blood pizen in it," said the woman. "Here, let me put this yer hankieker around it to keep the cold out. My land! What mischief boys does!"

The freckled boy broke away from her and hurried through the store. The large woman waddled slowly after him, anxiety written in capital letters on her kindly face.

As she passed out of the store Parsons broke into a smothered guffaw, and the little tailor winked at Washington Hancock.

"She's all right," said Hancock. "Some women is jest natchelly that way. She's a-going over to Mis' Bergey's now to try to scare her into a conniption fit, but she won't. Miss Bergey's got too many of 'em to worry 'bout."

"You Heemis!" hollers Mis' Bergey. "You quit that bawlin' right away; you hear me? If you git cuttin' up them didoes ag'in I'll take a switch to you 'bout these days you'll git hurted, mark my words, actin' like that. Go up an' pull them doors shut!"

"That'll do to tell," said the storekeeper. "If 'twasn't so I wouldn't tell it," said Hancock with a virtuous expression. "She ain't like Mis' Sowash's woman. You know Mis' don't you, Sol?"

Baker shook his head. "It was over on Gooseneck," supplemented Hancock. "Rufe knows him if you don't. Mighty poor stick Mis' is, too, but his wife seems to think he's about all right. Mis' wife jest natchelly was that there kind of woman—jest like Mrs. Bergey ain't."

"One time when they was a thrashin' Cleoro Perkins, who was cuttin', an' he got one of his fingers cut. 'Twan't much, but if you could have heard the fuss his wife made you'd have thought his head was cut off. After she'd got his finger tied up even she'd still keep a-pityin' him an' askin' him if it didn't hurt him."

"Ain't that too bad?" she'd say. "Jest to think o' you bein' carved up that-a-way! You shorly do have the wust luck of any man I ever knew; you shorly do! Mis' honey, tell me if I can't do suthin' fer you. I hate to see you gettin' an' an' standin' around an' holdin' my hands. My! It must hurt you powerful bad! A quarter of an inch more an' it would have cut you clear to the bone, an' there you set makin' nothin' of it!"

"Mis' kind o' liked it," pursued Hancock. "He'd tell her to quit fussin', but he kind o' liked it all the same. He does yet."

"Does he get it?" asked the storekeeper. "I hain't been up Gooseneck way for five years or more," replied Hancock. "Mebbe he kits it. There was one time, though, when she was weighed in the balance an' found lack in." "That was one day when the Farmers and Drivers' bank failed an' Mis' had $230 he had in it an' as he come back from town his horses got to actin' up an' finally run away an' busted up the wagon an' threw Mis' out an' put his ankle out o' joint an' finally missed the bridge over Gooseneck creek an' drowned themselves. He was settin' by the side o' the road when his hired man come along ridin' hickety split to find him an' tell him that the barn had burned down while he was tryin' to doctor the Hereford bull what had got into the corn an' founded himself. The hired man went to a neighbor's an' got Mis' home an' his wife met him at the gate."

"Too much fer her to do justice to, I s'pose," ventured Hancock. "Well, she done her best," said Hancock. "That was about three o'clock in the afternoon an' she kep' it up siddy till after the doctor come at eight. Then she went into the kitchen to get some water hot up. When she come back she started bathin' Mis' ankle agin an' didn't say nothin' for a minit or two. That made Mis' mad."

"By gol, Hetty!" he says. "Don't you realize all what's happened? I s'hd think you'd say suthin' to show you're a leetle mite sorry!"—Chicago Daily News.

South African Winter Resort.

The popularity of Victoria falls, Rhodesia, as a winter resort for English men and women is increasing to such an extent that it has been found necessary to augment the railway service and to increase the hotel accommodations.

The New Congressman.

He dreamed of how he would orate. And found those musings pleasant. But the only speech he made to date was quite verbatim. "Present!"—Chicago Sun.

A SYMPATHETIC WOMAN

By KENNETT HARRIS

The freckled boy with the large bump on his forehead wriggled in the clutch of the large woman who wore the black straw hat trimmed with brown velvet and Concord grapes.

"Tain't nothin'," he said. "The skin ain't skassy peeled."

"You pore young one!" exclaimed the woman in horror-stricken tones. "How in the name of massy did you come to do that? Does it hurt you, Johnny?"

"Naw," replied the freckled boy, contemptuously. "Ain't nothin' to hurt. You might get blood pizen in it," said the woman. "Here, let me put this yer hankieker around it to keep the cold out. My land! What mischief boys does!"

PAID HIS FINE

Waverly—William Maylon, the young man who was arrested for an assault on another young man named Hyde plead guilty to the charge and paid a fine of $5 yesterday afternoon. He at first refused to plead guilty, and said that he was justified because of the language used by the young man whom he assaulted. He concluded later, however, that the language was not a justification, and admitted the charge.

TIE THE PUP

Waverly—If you have a dog and have not fully obeyed the law in regard to their care and the safeguards that are provided, you had better watch out or the dog catcher will get the pup and lock him in the pound. Then you will have to hand over the prescribed amount of shekels to again get him into your possession, otherwise he will be killed. The implements for the capture of such dogs as are running at large have been in the town hall for some time, and this morning two men took them and started out to deplete that portion of the canine tribe that is now running at large, many of which could be spared. No captures have yet been reported, but there were several lively foot races between the man with the net and the liberty loving mongrel.

PLEASANTLY SURPRISED

Waverly—Chas. Collins' marriage on the United States battleship Alabama who is spending ten days at the home of his parents on Chemung St., was pleasantly surprised by a number of his friends last evening. The evening was spent in games, music and other amusements. After a few hours enjoyment the guests were ushered into the dining room where a bounteous supper was served. The guests were the Misses Laura Stevens, Bertha Hess, Susan Squires, Helen Dillon, Edna Collins, Ona Fairbanks, and Messrs. Clarence Langeland, Lester Muncie Larrea Degroff and Percy Allinger.

GAVE A DEMONSTRATION

It is said that two well known base ball players went to the Lehigh station on Thursday night and beautifully trimmed a couple of express messengers. The assault is said to have been made without provocation, and that the base ball artists simply wanted to demonstrate their ability as exponents of the pugilistic art. No arrests will follow, but it is said that the messengers were most liberally decorated with discolored optics, and that the ermine flew in all directions.
