"FATHER" TAYLOR AND BUTLER.

Former Had Rather the Better of Spicy Repartee.

Sailors who frequented the old Seamen's Bethel on Hanover street will remember "Father" Taylor, as he was familiarly termed, says a writer in the Boston Herald.

At a leading hotel in Boston a delegation of ministers were having a dinner at which a few lawyers were present, among them Gen. Benjamin F. Butler, "Father" Taylor and Butler were indulging in some spicy repartee.

In the course of their conversation Taylor asked the general if lawyers ever made mistakes. "Oh, certainly," was the reply. "to err is human."

"Well," said his questioner, "what do you do when you make a mistake?" "If it is a big one," said Butler, "I try to rectify it, but if a small mistake I let it pass unnoticed. By the way," he added, "do ministers ever make mistakes?"

"Certainly," to err is human," was "Father" Taylor's reply.

"Well, what do you do when you make a mistake?" asked Butler. "If the mistake is a big one I try to rectify it, but if a small one I let it pass unnoticed. For example, I was preaching last Sunday to my sailors, and in my sermon made the statement that the devil was the father to all lawyers. I meant liars, but it being a small mistake I let it pass by."

Ready for the Worst. D. M. L. King tells this story of an applicant whom he recently examined for a leading life insurance company:

"His heart action was poor, the man had gummy tendencies, had an incipient appendicitis, and his eyes and complexion were those of a strenuous worker and diner. Concluding my examination, I frankly warned him that he was in the way of drinking himself blind. 'Oh, well,' was his philosophical reply. 'I guess I've seen about everything worth seeing, anyway.'"

Iron Known to Ancient Egyptians. That iron was known to the Egyptians, even in the earliest times, is evident from their conspicuous metallurgical knowledge, and from the fact that the working of granite and porphyry is scarcely conceivable without steel tools, that the oldest tombs have inscriptions referring to iron, and that sources of supply of manganiferous iron ore were found by Prof. Bauerman in upper Egypt.

Barbarous Paris Water. We are far from blaming the prefecture of the Seine for warning us that it is dangerous to drink the water that it supplies us without boiling it. The system, in spite of the millions wasted, is absolutely barbarous. When it does not rain we have no water, and when it does rain the water is not drinkable.—From L'Eclair of Paris.

The Patient Struggle. Patience and struggle. An earnest use of what we have now and all the time, an earnest discontent until we come to what we ought to be. Are not these what we need? What, in their rich union, we could not get, except in just such a life as this with its delayed completions.—Phillips Brooks.

NEW YORK As the Girl from Homeville Saw It

"Yes," said the girl who had just returned to Homeville from a visit to New York, "I saw New York."

"You don't seem a bit enthusiastic," said her sister, who had done without pin money for a month and made over her last winter's suit in order to let the "flower of the family" get a glimpse of "the hurried life."

"I ain't," replied the other ungrammatically but plainly. "I ain't a bit enthusiastic about New York. I'm enthusiastic at getting back to Homeville, though," and she sighed with content and stretched her arms lazily ceilingward.

"Look!" she said, "I can stretch my full length here without bumping against anything. Nobody can do that in New York. They live in holes in the wall there, about the size of a slice of cheese. This is a beautiful home, Adelaide, when you come to think about it."

"Yes, I'll tell you what I saw in New York. I saw windows and windows full of jewels that nobody but a nabob could afford. I saw shops full of hats, that I couldn't buy—hats filled with masses of beautiful plumes, each one worth a king's ransom or the sum total of our grocery bill for a year. I saw dumplings covered with gowns that would make your mouth water standing in rows in the shops. I saw counters heaped with silks and laces worth a month's income per yard. I saw touring cars and automobiles that I couldn't afford to ride in. I saw the outside of hotels and the lobbies of theaters that I couldn't afford to live in or go to. I saw women muffled in furs and massaged and manicured and curled within an inch of their lives getting in and out of upholstered carriages. I saw liveried servants who would turn up their noses at me. I saw orchids, but I never touched one nor tried to smell it, that would have cost me one dollar. I saw blooded horses and blooded dogs and blooded cats that belonged to other people. I saw women dining in cafes that I never thought of entering. And I saw—but what's the use? I could go on forever. My! but—Homeville's a nice place."

"But," protested her sister unconvinced, "I thought the Worthleys were pretty well off."

"Oh, the Worthleys are all right. They have a good income; but they're only middle class. Out here in Homeville they could live in a big house and drive their own horses and look down on the multitude; but down there in New York, they live in a little flat with one hired girl—when they can get her—and ride up and down in an elevator with an elevator boy who sneers at them because they only tip him a dollar a month. They never go to the theaters, because in order to go to the theater in New York you have to begin saving a month in advance and to get your seats weeks ahead of time."

"Middle class people can't do anything in New York but sit in a corner and watch other people enjoy themselves. If they dine at a smart restaurant, they feel horribly shabby and have to retrench on the household expenses for a week afterward. They eat at quick lunch restaurants when they are out of a servant. They go about town in a dirty street car or a flimsy subway train. They never entertain because they haven't room and besides they can't be sure they will have a servant girl a week in advance. They don't go to church much, because usually the churches are too far away, and the man who passes the plate glowers at them if they don't put a big bill in it. When they go shopping they resolutely pass by everything to stern necessities."

"One week more of life there, Adelaide, and I'd have been the most discontented woman on earth. I never felt so shabby, so lonely and so hatefully envious in my life before. There's a little demon of discontent in the air there. Now in Homeville," she added with a comfortable sigh, "there isn't much to see—but you can have everything you do see!"—N. Y. Press.

The Question Unsettled. "Bogob!" observed Cassidy, "tisht' foine shacks av wages that Ryan is makin' these days."

"Phat's he doin'?" asked Corrigan. "Shure, he's janitor av a bank by day an' nightwatchman av a residence by night."

"But phin does he shiape?" "Ain't O'jist after sayin' that he's a nightwatchman?"—Judge.

Cupid Turns the Leaves. "Let me see," said the apple-cheeked country girl as she entered the big department store; "have you any sit-close books?"

"Sit-close books?" echoed the clerk in astonishment. "What in the world are they?"

"Ay, er—family albums. You see, I have a gentleman caller."—Chicago Daily News.

LOCAL NEWS

Do not fail to attend the entertainment by the Elma B. Smith company at the high school hall tomorrow evening. The regular admission is only 25c and the reserved seats 10c extra. Reserved seats are now on sale at Jump's drug store.

"Way Down East," which has been so successful the past nine years, will be seen at the Loomis next Saturday afternoon and evening, Dec 8. It is a delightful play of New England life and will be presented as heretofore under the stage direction of Joseph R. Gismmer, who is certainly a master of stagecraft. The scenic effects will be very beautiful and elaborate. The farm pictures and the snow storm scene lend themselves well to stage realism. The company is said to be well selected. The sale of seats opens Thursday.

CHILDREN'S SOCIAL

The children of the Church of the Redeemer Sunday school are going to send a Xmas box to the orphan children of the Johnstowne home. Each class has selected some one article, and on Tuesday evening, Dec 4, at 7:30, they are going to present it at the rectory, 107 Bark avenue. All those bringing presents will be admitted free, and the mothers' fathers and friends will be asked to give 10 cents to help the children's gift along.

A program has been arranged to entertain all guests. Mrs. Hill, Miss Peckens and Miss White will sing solos. Readings will be given by Mrs. Snow and Miss Newell Masters. John Hill, Fay Lewis and Jay Lewis, will give an instrumental trio. Refreshments will also be served.

No More Country Doctors.

The country doctor is rapidly becoming extinct as a species, says the New York Herald. The men one meets at their societies look, dress, talk and act as the men do at any meeting of city physicians. The papers presented are quite up to the city standard, the discussions markedly above those of the city men. The surgical experiences related would astonish some men who think the city clinics and clinicians do all of the work, or at least all that is well done.

Indiscreet Revelations.

There is a kind of Freemasonry among men that does not exist among women. Men are all in league with each other. Practically speaking, all have the same faults and vices, but they change their sex with none. It would be an admirable thing if women would copy men in this respect. The world would not know half as much about us if only women would hold their tongues about feminine failings.

French Wealth.

The population of France is about 40,000,000; the wealth of France is nearly $45,000,000. Robert F. Skinner, in some recent statistics, shows how evenly this wealth is distributed. The number of estates administered in 1904 was 294,787, and of these one-half were for values ranging from less than $10,000 to a little under $100,000. Only three were $10,000,000.

Deaths from Snake Bite.

There are no complete statistics to show how many persons die in the world of snake bites each year. The number, however, has been placed at 20,000. In the United States, so far as known, the annual fatalities amount to about 50. Florida is generally looked upon to contribute several of these with regularity.

Female Fear of Mice.

Why are women afraid of mice? Although this problem has claimed the attention of the greatest philosophers, it must be admitted that we are as much at a loss for a scientific and psychological explanation as was Adam after the first field mouse of the tribe drove Eve up a tree.

Club for the Lonely.

Those who have no friends in London and complain of its great loneliness now have a club all to themselves. The new organization is called the Eligible Social Club. Its object is to bring together men and women who are lonely. A vocalist and a playwright have applied for membership.

Life's Ambition.

All life is a fight with self. The battle begins with consciousness and never lets up until the aged warrior goes to another world for his crown. The supreme ambition of every noble life is to conquer self. The greatest sorrow of the world is sorrow over the soul's defeat.

Letter to a Schoolmaster. "My son will be unable to attend school to-day, as he has just shaved himself for the first time."—Lustige Blätter.
