MIKE'S ROMANCE

ALWAYS did admire Mike," began the young man who never balks at telling of his own affairs if they happen to enter into the story. "I admire him because he stays later than I dare to, though I do not admire his taste, for he is paying assiduous court to the not plump landlady who keeps the boarding house next door.

"Three times a week, including Sunday, is the extent of the favor vouchsafed me by the only girl, but Mike is at the house next door every one of those times, and I am told that he is there the rest of the night, too. Mike is caretaker of the mystic halls and portals of lodge No. 47. It is only fair to say that his duties detain him from opening his evening's siege until after 10 o'clock.

"Sitting on the doorsteps of the only girl's house, the only girl and I would see Mike carefully close the door and then he would enter the house, and I would see him running across the street and stand bowing, hat in hand, at the foot of the steps next door.

"Good evening," he would ejaculate cheerfully. His greeting would be returned by the not plump landlady, who then hastily vanished into her house, and emerged soon, bearing a large water pitcher. This Mike seized eagerly, ran back to the lodgerooms and presently returned with it full of mineral water and clinking ice from the lodge tank. This was the inevitable opening of the evening's siege. Then Mike would seat himself on one of the steps of the house next door, as close to the landlady as decorum would permit. From that time on conversation would flow in an uninterrupted stream—wonderful conversation of trips on the lake, happenings at amusement parks, the day's news, the price of board and of rent. Especially naive snatches compelled our attention, and the insistent burden of it was forever crashing into our lower-toned talk.

"Sometimes Mike would lead the landlady to the corner drugstore, where we suspected that ice cream sodas created rather than filled gaps in the conversation. On one memorable occasion Mike had a holiday and took the landlady and the landlady's niece, who was visiting her, by steamer to Lincoln park. But those were the only breaks in the regular programme. Weeks flew along. As often as I sat on the only girl's front steps the uplinking water pitcher was borne from across the street to the house next door, and always when I had said good night and turned my face resolutely down the street, there sat Mike upon the steps next door.

"There came an evening when a stranger sat upon the steps of the house next door. He was big and cumbersome. His face was weather worn and seamed, and his voice was brusque and incisive. In due time Mike came running across the street. There was a faint introduction by the not plump landlady and Mike and the stranger shook hands suspiciously. Mike received the pitcher and, as usual, returned with it filled. The stranger's eyes followed him. For once conversation did not flourish and for once Mike did not outstay me.

"When he was gone the brusque, incisive voice asked some questions in tones which shattered the silence and overbore our half-heard talk. There were low, monosyllabic answers and then sobers.

"By special privilege I came again the next night. The stranger again occupied the steps next door. The landlady from time to time shot furtive glances toward the door of the lodgerooms. On time Mike appeared, closing the inner doors behind him. Looking across the street he must have caught a warning signal, for he eluded the outer doors also, locked them, removed his hat in an ineffective bow and then sauntered down the street.

"All was silence, if not peace, next door. The stranger seemed to lack the powers of entertainment of the gifted Mike. I suggested a stroll toward the park, and found, as I had hoped, that the only girl had made inquiries to some purpose. The stranger, it appeared, had wooed and won the not plump landlady when she was not a landlady and had gone west to win his way. There he succeeded, as he thought. He had returned to claim his reward and had found a landlady who appreciated offerings of ice water from across the street.

"The end is not yet. The stranger still hangs around, trying to regain his claim. Mike has returned to the field and brings his tinkling offerings as before. Our sympathies generally go out to the hero of romance who achieves a way to fight obstacles when achieves a human. But there is something very human about Mike. I dare say he thinks it would be convenient to board so near to the scene of his watchful care. Still, the bringing of ice water to the not plump landlady is a delicate attention, and—I can't help admiring Mike. He is again staying later, much later, than I dare."

SERVED WARNING

ON JUNK DEALERS

Waverly—Owing to the trouble recently experienced by the police in locating parties who have been guilty of stealing metal from the railroads, Chief of Police Brooks is serving copies of Chapter 308, laws of 1903, upon all junk dealers, and if the law is not obeyed hereafter the guilty parties will be prosecuted. The law provides that junk dealers upon purchasing pigs of metal, copper wire, or brass car journals, shall require the seller to give a signed statement setting out when, where and from whom he obtained the property; also his age, residence, occupation, name of employer, and place of employment. The junk dealer shall immediately file the same with the chief of police of the city or village where the purchase is made. He shall then lay aside all such property for a period of five days after first tagging each separate purchase so as to indicate the weight and from whom and when purchased. Any failure to observe the provisions of the act is a misdemeanor.

WILL MEET TOMORROW

Waverly—Tomorrow afternoon the Foreign Missionary society of the M. E. church will meet at the home of the Rev. H. H. Dresser, and the subject is "Missionary Work in the Society Islands." These islands have had a very interesting history, and it was due to the visit of English navigators to them, and the reports that they brought back to England that led to the organization of the London Missionary society.

LECTURE DECEMBER 11

AT BAPTIST CHURCH.

The South's Greatest Orator to Lecture on the Reign of the Democracy.

Waverly—Next Tuesday, Dec. 11, John Temple Graves will deliver a lecture at the Baptist church entitled The Reign of the Democracy. Mr. Graves is conceded to be the greatest orator of the South at the present time and his subject is very timely in this age of political corruption when politicians through appeals to the passions and prejudices of men seek their own elevation.

The lecturer is a type of the old time orator and his discourse is a finished product in every particular. He follows the best traditions of what a lecturer should be.

Geographical Peculiarity.

The most advanced grand division of the old world—Europe—has the greatest number of islands in proportion to its area, dropping the island continent of Australia out of consideration. Africa, the least civilized and developed, is singularly wanting in islands of any importance on its shores.

Teach Scientific Gardening.

In the national schools of Sweden and in the colleges for the education of national school teachers scientific gardening is taught. Children receive practical instruction in the cultivation of plants, berries, flowers, herbs and fruits, and in the management of hotbeds, greenhouses and so forth.

Men Flock to the Cities.

In the United States the cities contain a much larger proportion of men than the country, on the average. The proportion of women to the total population is greater in the villages and on the farms, though there are some striking exceptions to both rules.

Lord Rosebery's Definition.

It is to Lord Rosebery that we are indebted for the most modern definition of memory. "What is memory?" said a friend one day to him. "Memory," replied his lordship, "is the feeling that steals over us when we listen to our friends' original stories."

Habit and Imitation.

Habit is our primal fundamental law. Habit and imitation—there is nothing more perennial in us than these two. They are the source of all working and all apprenticeship, of all practice and all learning. In the world.—Carlyle.

City and Country Dwellers.

It is a mistake to suppose that the oldest countries always have the largest proportion of city dwellers. Argentina has a greater urban population, relatively to the total, than France, and Australia than Spain.

Men and Women Immigrants.

Of the countries from which the immigrants come in large numbers to the United States, Italy sends the greatest proportion of men. Ireland furnishes the largest proportion of women.
