The William McMillan, sentenced for life that the Yaquis were upon the warpath and that the few people in the neigh-borhood of the station and railroad were in danger. The station master, a man named Thompson, belittled the matter and said he and his wife would remain at their post. The train bearing Colonel Maxson and party had scarcely left the station when the Yaquis descended on the little party of Mexicans and Americans and butchered four.

Station Agent Thompson and his wife escaped by boarding a work train that pulled in after four of the people bad been killed and Thompson and his wife had defended themselves back of the barricaded doors of the station. As the work train appeared the Indians withdrew.

The train bearing Colonel Maxson and party continued to a station about the property of this starving, freezing, fifteen miles farther along the line, and then, as the signs of the uprising became more alarming, the party decided to return. When the train arrived at Jancho the station house bad been bursed, and four human bedies lay along the track.

The party stopped a few minutes in the hope that the survivors might be found and taken to a place of safety. Yaquis appeared in the distance, but did not come within range of the few armed people on the train.

The bodies of the victims were still warm when Maxson saw them, and with the aid of others on the train they were given hasty burial.

Not many miles along the road the scene was duplicated. Four more dead bodies of Mexicans and Americans were discovered along the tracks. The little hand at this station had been able to repulse the attack of the Ya-quis with the loss of but four of their number. The remaining members of the company refused to leave on the train, but said that they could stand off the Indians until the next day, when the rurales would reach the spot and summary justice would be meter out to the murderers.

SPRINGFIELD, S. C., Dec. 28. Following the killing of Tiney Chavis, a white man, by Stephen Clements, s negro, a lynching was averted here by the negro being rushed to the Barnwell jail. Chavis went to the negro's house to collect a small debt when he was pushed out of the door and shot to death in the yard. Further serious trouble was narrowly averted at the preliminary trial when a mulatto nam ed Livingston of New York forced himself into the trial and began ques tioning the witnesses.
