MINING SCHEMES ARE DANGEROUS

Ten Cents a Share Propositions Should Be Turned Down Good and Hard.

At this time of the year there is being dumped into the advertising space of the ordinary newspapers of the country yards of mining stock advertising. You can get rich by investing in a limited number of shares at ten cents of a company that has gold ore assaying $100,000 per ton; or you can become a millionaire by putting $2.00 per month into copper, lead or silver mining stock.

Advertising of this character is both dangerous and vicious. The bait is intended for school teachers, mechanics, clerks and others who have succeeded in laying by a little spare cash, and who usually are unsophisticated as to the various mining schemes that are being floated for the purpose of hoodwinking people out of their hard earned coin.

In short it is an allurements put forth to catch the very class of readers whom the newspapers claim to champion and protect. The various mine investing schemes are dangerous to public morals because it is pure speculation, illegitimate ruinous as the placing of one's saving on a game chance.

It is vicious because in 99 cases out of 100 it is fraudulent—a get-rich-quick scheme that fills the pockets of a few sharpers and leaves hundreds of poor victims impoverished.

It may be set down as a sure enough axiom that when a body of men have a good thing in the shape of a mine they don't have to advertise in order to sell stock at 10, 15 and 25 cents a share. And they never do advertise. They don't have to call on the general public for ten cents a share for treasury or other stock in order to develop their property. They themselves take the stock perhaps letting a few friends in on the deal, and if they really do need more money to make themselves rich through their undeveloped mines, they call in Schwab, Gates or some other millionaire, and sell to him in a lump sum. You never hear, however, of a Schwab or a Gates buying ten cent mining stock, and you never hear of either of them getting "stung" by fake concerns.

All the secrecy possible is thrown around a good mining venture, at least until its ownership is settled in the hands of a few who will reap the profits. It is not necessary to advertise good mining stock for sale. Therefore it is advisable to keep your money in your pocket when the other fellows has a ten cent scheme for getting possession of it.

TIME TABLES WILL DISAPPEAR NEXT WEEK.

Railroads Under New Ruling Will No Longer Exchange Transportation for Advertising.

The beginning of the new year will probably note the absence of most of the railroad time tables from the columns of the local newspapers. The inter-state commerce commission has ruled that the railroads will not be allowed to exchange transportation for advertising. The result will be that the railroads will be compelled to negotiate their advertising contracts on a strictly cash basis, and the newspaper men will also be compelled to pay cash for their railroad tickets. Each party will probably be just as well off in the end, but the change from one method to the other will result in the public being left in the dark as to the time of the arrival and departure of trains.

RATHBUN'S GOODS NOT SOLD FOR TAXES

He Exhibited Tax Collector's Receipt Which Showed That His Taxes For 1905 Had Been Paid.

Tax Collector Plumstead did not sell the household goods of C. H. Rathbun this morning for the payment of 1905 taxes. A few days ago notices were posted by the tax collector advertising Mr. Rathbun's household goods for sale. It appears that the collector claimed that Mr. Rathbun was in arrears for taxes for 1905 to the extent of $20.49. Two or three days after the notices were posted Mr. Rathbun exhibited a receipt for this amount and after that the notices disappeared.

This morning it was expected that the sale would take place, but there was no one on hand to sell them, and it is presumed that it has been declared off. It is quite likely that Mr. Rathbun will institute a suit for damages on account of the unpleasant notoriety which he has been given.
