BOMB WRECKS BANK

Philadelphia Cashier and Insame Orank Killed.

HAD DENANDED LOAN OF $5,000.

Cyclonic Explosion Destroys Two Lives, Injures Twelve and Completely Ruine Antional Bank's Offices.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 7.-Two men were blown to pieces, another probably fatally injured and several slightly hurt in the Fourth Street National bank here by a bomb thrown by a man who had falled to negotiate a loan of $5,000 with the president of the institution, Richard H. Rushton.

The dead are W. Z. McLear, cushier of the bank, and Rolla Steele, the bomb thrower, identified by the nameplate on a key ring.

The injured are Harry Beck, bank employee; Miss Julia Brady, stenographer; William Crump, private messenger to the president of the bank, who will probably die; A. S. Dominci, C. R. Horton, Frank Labold, office boy; Eugene McIlhone, clerk; Arthur McNichol, clerk; Harper Mercer, clerk; T. B. Rutter, Albert Smith, hurt by flying glass while walking along the street, and William Wright, clerk.

The Fourth Street National bank is one of the richest financial institutions of Philadelphia and occupies most of the ground floor of the Bullitt building. Just before the bank was to close for the day and a rush was on a poorly dressed man, carrying in his hand a small parcel wrapped in paper, entered the bank and told one of the attaches that he had urgent business with the president. He was shown into his

Mr. Rushton was busy and, in accordance with banking routine, motioned the man toward the cashier's department. This is a suit of several small offices opening off the corridor across the bank and to one side of the big armor plated vaults.

The bomb thrower entered the office of Mr. McLear, who was at his desk, and, according to the latter's assistant, talked with him for a moment and then threw to the floor a bomb wrapped in a newspaper.

There was an ear splitting report, the bank filled with smoke and dust, all the windows and glass partitions were shattered to bits, counters were upheaved and overturned, books, typewriters, counting machines, cash about in confusion.

A shower of gold and silver swept through the bank from the desk of the give as only one trial-after that place. Partitions, desks and chairs by those who rushed inside to the aid their bed-of the injured.

Officials, clerks, attaches of the bank with the gas main, but as the odor was and panic stricken, and there were several minutes of the wildest panic before there could be any attempt at rescue or inquiry as to the fate of those near the explosion.

The Bullitt building tenants, men and romen, clerks and stenographers, rushed from their offices and down the stairway. Nebody waited for the elevators. The bank force, all of whom had been thrown to the ground, and those doing business at the tellers' windows rushed into Fourth street as the usual burrying crowds of the financial district, hearing the report, ran to the building. In a moment Fourth street and Sansom street were impassable.

The reserve policeman turned in a fre alarm. With the fire apparatus came a patrel wagon load of policenen. Firemen and policemen pushed back the crowds and entered the building. So quickly had the alarm been given that smoke still obscured the Under a pile of debris, terribly mangled, was the body of Mr. McLear. Ten feet away, with the head and shoulders under wreckage, was the body of the bomb thrower. Both legs were off. Afterward bits of the man's fiesh were found clinging to the ceiling.

Mr. Rushton said the man came into his office and, after stating that his name was G. E. Williams and that he lived in the suburbs of Philadelphia. asked for a loan of $5,000.

"I asked him what security he had." said Mr. Rushton, "and he replied that he had none. He added, however, that he was honest and would pay the interest annually and return the loan at the end of five years.

"I told him I could not let him have the money without security, and he asked me to make a sixty day loan. "The man appeared to be eccentric and nervously fingered his pockets. From an inside pocket he drew out a picture of his wife and child and said.

'Ain't they all right?" "I told him I was busy and had an engagement and would have to go out. He said, 'Oh, you don't have to go out

"I then got up from my seat and left he office. I told the cashler, Mr. Mc-Lear, to go in and get rid of the fellow. Shortly after the bomb was thrown." The only workable clew to the bomb thrower's identity is a key ring found near his body. On it is a tag bearing the name "R. Steele, Garner, Ia."

A dispatch from Garner, la., says that Robert Steele, formerly a resident of Garner, left there six years ago for the east and was supposed to have been living in Philadelphia. When here he was engaged in peddling patent medicines. He was about thirty five years old.

"This dreadful outrage was undoubtedly the work of a 'crank.' No sane man would do such a deed," said Mr. McKenty, director of public safety, who made a personal investigation. "I do not think the man was an anarchist, as has been suggested. He was just a 'crank.'"

With the finding of the personal effects of the man who threw the bomb there is little doubt left in the minds ceeded in cluding capture and reaching of Garner, la

The bomb thrower was found to have slept Friday night at the Grant House, a hostelry on the outskirts of the Tenderloin.

There was a suit bearing the tag of a Chicago clothing house and a pair of overalls marked with the name of a Lynchburg (Va.) merchant.

A Lynchburg report says that Steele worked there as a concrete construction foreman for several months, and when Mrs. Steele and a ten-year-old son were seen at their home there she said that Steele left there Thursday morning, telling her that he was going to Danville. Va., to secure work on railway construction contract.

Brownsville Affair In the Senate.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7 .- The discusston of the episode in Brownsville. Tex., which resulted in the discharge from the service of three companies of negro troops by the president, continues to be the topic of paramount interest in the senate. The question came up today, and present indications are that it will continue to hold a front place on the calendar for three or four days. The introduction of Senator Lodge's amendment to Senator Foraker's resolution has had the effect of injecting a great deal of new matter into the discussion and of shifting the debate from the mere question of facts in connection with the Brownsville affair to the subject of the general right of the president to dismiss soldiers from the army.

GABBAS WANTED "RAISULI DEAD."

War Minister Had Rebel Forces Surrounded, but They Managed to Elude Capture-General Bagdadi is Wounded

TANGIER, Jan. 7-Zinat, Raisull's stronghold, was virtually destroyed by fire and fell into the hands of the troops of the sultan at noon after a short and almost bloodless fight.

Raisuli and his 700 followers sucof the police that he was Rollo Steele the mountains despite the elaborate plans of War Minister Gabbas to prevent their escape.

It is reported that General Bagdadi. chief of the sultan's army, was wounded while leading the attack.

No firing took place during the night. but at 10 o'clock in the morning the artillery, under command of an Algerian native lieutenant, whom the French authorities permitted to participate in the battle on request of War Minister Gabbas, opened fire on the town.

The Moorish gunners showed utter incapacity in handling their guas, and the infantry fired haphazard, Two shells dropped inside the fastness with out reply, and thereupon a body of the sultan's troops charged, shouting, and reached the walls amid desultory shots from the surrounding brush.

The gates to the town were found to be open, but there were no occupants of the place except fifteen prisoners including among whom were four Portuguese.

A detachment of the government troops continued for some hours firing in the direction of the mountains. where Raisuli and his followers were observed fleeing.

Meanwhile the other government troops pillaged the stronghold, securing considerable booty in the shape of costly carpets, arms, cattle and sheep. No fatalities in the fighting are reported, though a few persons on both
