"REDS" KILL PAVLOFF
 Assassin Wore Military Uniform as Disguise.

ORGANIZATION HAS DOOMED CZAR.
 Russian General Called "Hangman Pavloff" Shot Seven Times in Court Garden—On Death List Since Cronstadt Executions.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 10.—Lieutenant General Vladimir Pavloff, military procurator or advocate general, generally known since the late parliament as "Hangman Pavloff," was shot and killed here while walking in the garden of the chief military court building.
 The crime was executed deliberately and showed the same careful preparation characteristic of the murders of General Ignatieff and Von der Laubi and was undoubtedly carried out by the same organization which has sentenced Emperor Nicholas and several of the ministers to death.
 The assassin, who wore the uniform of a military clerk attached to the court, succeeded in obtaining an entrance to the garden under the pretext of submitting a report to the military procurator.

He approached the unsuspecting general within arm's length, drew a rapid fire pistol and fired the whole load, seven shots, in quick succession into Pavloff's body.
 Every shot was well aimed, and two of them tore a gaping wound in his breast from which the general expired while being carried to his apartments near by.

From the nature of the wounds it appeared that the steel jacketed bullets were "dum-dummed"—that is, they were flattened out of their regular shape that they might inflict more serious wounds.
 Hastily slipping another "clip" of cartridges into his empty revolver and drawing a second weapon, the assassin ran across the garden to the carriage entrance, threatened the porter with his pistols and dashed down Glinka street, past the Imperial Opera house, with a crowd of house porters and court attaches in close pursuit.

A policeman in front of the opera house attempted to seize the assassin, but was shot dead by the man, who turned and opened fire on his pursuers, wounding a boy.
 The terrorist then resumed his flight, firing right and left at police officers and porters. The result was that his ammunition rapidly became exhausted and he was intercepted and captured when he reached Lantern lane.

General Pavloff's assassin was apparently informed by an accomplice among court attaches that the general was in the garden, as the garden is entirely inclosed, and on account of it being a holiday the military procurator was not following his usual routine.
 At the police station the murderer was in the highest spirits in view of how simply and easily his plan was executed and answered the officers' questions with laughing jeers.
 General Pavloff died while being moved to his apartments in the Military Tribunal building. He was fifty-five years old and leaves a widow and two children.

Few men in St. Petersburg were more cordially despised than the procurator, "Hangman Pavloff." Beginning his public career in the judicial department of the army, he was made military judge, next judge advocate general of the war ministry and then procurator of the supreme military court.
 General Pavloff was president of the recent court martial at Cronstadt which tried the mutineers who took part in the outbreak of last August. While it was in session the terrorists made an attempt to blow up the building. He went before the last duma as the representative of the government and the assembly attempted to defend the military execution which had then aroused public indignation. The members of the duma blessed him down, and he was compelled to leave the building.

It has been practically a foregone conclusion that General Pavloff was destined for a violent death. His attitude in regard to the execution of mutineers in the army and navy and his refusal to respect the wishes and demands of the duma and desist from these executions made him one of the most bitterly hated men in all the country.
 Vice Admiral Doubovoff, ex-governor general of Moscow and at present a member of the council of empire, has received notification that another attempt upon his life will be made.

Vice Admiral Doubovoff incurred the enmity of the revolutionists by his repression of the Moscow disorders of last year. His life has been threatened many times, and several plots to assassinate him have been frustrated.

 PORTLAND, Me., Jan. 10.—Enraged because a fellow workman, Patrick J. Griffin, hit him upon a painful ball, Isaac Romeo, it is alleged by the police, struck Griffin in the side with a heavy bar of iron, the blow causing his death three hours later. Romeo was arrested on a charge of manslaughter.

"LIFE A RABBIT DREAM."

Artist Chittenden Seals His Room and Arranges Suicide Methodically.

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—With a note lying near by, in which he had written that "life is a rabbit dream," the body of Albert A. Chittenden, an artist of some note, was found in his luxuriously furnished apartments on West Twenty-ninth street here.
 Chittenden had committed suicide by inhaling gas and had been dead at least three days.
 He had first pasted heavy wrapping paper over every window and crevice in the apartment and had then lain down on the floor, with a gas tube attached to a jet hanging over him.

With paper he had formed a cone to fit over his mouth and attached one end of the tube to a cord suspended from the ceiling, so that the cone should rest directly over his face. Pinned on his waistcoat was the following note:
 "Life is a rabbit dream. Ha, ha! Such a funny dream, but enough. I am ready to awake to something less ridiculous."
 A letter addressed to C. E. Knaublauch, 62 Broadway, was taken in charge by the police and later, upon an order from the coroner, turned over to Mr. Knaublauch. The latter said that the communication was evidently the message of a man crippled mentally and physically. The letter was said to be a rambling comment on certain Wall street transactions.

Chittenden, who was about forty years of age, was of a retiring disposition and had few intimate acquaintances. He was last seen alive Saturday. The janitor's fears being aroused, he forced an entrance to the apartments and found the artist dead.
 Seven men are in hospitals fatally injured, and twenty-four others have not been accounted for.
 While the mill officials are inclined to believe that all of the missing men were not cremated in the molten metal, nothing definite is known as to their present whereabouts. Only one man, George Knox, has turned up since the explosion, and Knox says everything happened so quick that he doubts whether the men escaped.
 Chief Peter Snyder of the fourth fire district was seriously injured while directing the firemen to extinguish the fire which followed the explosion.

George Knox, the only man of the party of workmen believed to have escaped uninjured, said:
 "It was awful. The furnace is one of the improved style, and thirty-five of us were working about, never thinking of an explosion. Suddenly there was a terrific roar, and immediately I started to run."
 Molten metal was thrown every place. Strömskog it was running in all directions, and I was confronted with an awful death unless I could run faster than the metal could travel. Thank God I reached a place of safety and not a minute too soon. I don't know what happened to the other men. I did not see any of them following the explosion. If they did not run quick and fast all are buried under six feet of molten metal."

TERRA COTTA WRECK INQUEST.

Night Railroad Men, Blamed For Disaster, Were Placed Under Arrest.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—The coroner's inquest over the Terra Cotta wreck of Sunday night, Dec. 30, last night held for the action of the grand jury Harry H. Hilderbrand, engineer of the "dead" train, 2120; Frank F. Hoffmeyer, conductor of that train; P. F. Dent, night train dispatcher at Baltimore; William E. McCauley, division operator of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad; E. L. Vermillion, engineer of local train 66, into which 2120 crashed; George W. Nagle, conductor of train 90; J. W. Kelly, Jr., trainmaster of the Baltimore and Ohio; and William M. Dutrow, the telegraph operator at Silver Spring.
 All the men held, except Dent, McCauley and Kelly, were in the building where the inquest was held and were placed under arrest.

Not So Disastrous as Reported.

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 10.—Officers of the Michigan Store works, which was swept by a disastrous fire, found, after a daylight examination of the establishment, that it was in much better condition for a resumption of business and rebuilding than they believed. The foundries, power plant and office building are undamaged, and much of the machinery of the works are undamaged. The officials expect to resume manufacturing next week. The persons injured during the fire are out of danger except Joseph Teck, whose condition is critical. The loss, it was said by officials, will be about $700,000.

Governor Glenn Read His Message.

RALEIGH, N. C., Jan. 10.—Governor Glenn read his message to the general assembly in joint session today at noon instead of transmitting it in the usual way. In writing: "When a resolution was presented in the house inviting the governor to address the legislature instead of sending a message an acrimonious debate ensued, in which leading Democrats criticized the governor severely. The only Republican who spoke was Mr. Farshaw, the leader of his party, who favored the innovation. The resolution was adopted."

EXPLOSION HORROR.

Pittsburg Steel Furnace Rains Molten Metal.

THREE DEAD, SEVEN HURT, MANY LOST

Out of Working Party of Thirty-five Only One Man Is Reported Safe—Bodies Horribly Mutilated.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 10.—One of the worst explosions in the history of the steel industry occurred at the Jones & Laughlin Steel works in their Eliza furnaces when a large quantity of gas which had accumulated at the base of the furnaces became ignited and exploded. Tons of molten metal was showered around the furnaces for a radius of forty feet.
 Out of a force of thirty-five men employed at the furnaces when the explosion occurred three of them—John Cramer, Andrew Featherka and Gustave Kessler—have been taken to the morgue, their bodies horribly mutilated by the fire.
 Seven men are in hospitals fatally injured, and twenty-four others have not been accounted for.
 While the mill officials are inclined to believe that all of the missing men were not cremated in the molten metal, nothing definite is known as to their present whereabouts. ENVOY'S VICTORY.

Phil Finch, Favorite, Defeated in New Orleans Feature.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 10.—Envoy's victory over the favorite, Phil Finch, in the fourth race was the exciting event of racing at City park. It was a drive all down the stretch, and many spectators said that the whip of Jockey Lowe, riding Envoy, while it did not touch Phil Finch, cut the air in front of his eyes and made him hesitate as Envoy drew ahead.
 The opening event, at five and a half furlongs, called out a bunch of poor three-year-old selling platers. The talent did little betting on this event, as many of the horses were evenly matched. Dinemock received most of the speculation and went to the post a slight favorite over Excuse Me and Enfin. Dinemock had an easy time winning from Duchess of Montebello by three lengths. Lintilla was an easy third. Summaries:
 First Race—Dinemock, first; Duchess of Montebello, second; Lintilla, third.
 Second Race—Subador, first; Narian, second; Orthodox, third.
 Third Race—Whisk Broom, first; Workaday, second; Ida May, third.
 Fourth Race—Envoy, first; Phil Finch, second; Charlatan, third.
 Fifth Race—Favorite, first; French Nun, second; Lena J., third.
 Sixth Race—Toboggan, first; Frontenac, second; Southern Cross, third.

Clement of Washington—have died here under the following circumstances: Mrs. Lawson's husband and Mr. Clement's wife were taken sick with measles in St. Petersburg and removed to the Government Hospital For Contagious Diseases. Mrs. Lawson went to the hospital to visit her husband, and Mr. Clement went there to see his wife. While in the building the visitors had to wrap themselves up in hospital sheets. These sheets had been used for smallpox patients and had not been disinfected, and as a result both contracted smallpox. Mr. Clement died a few days ago and Mrs. Lawson on Tuesday. Both Mr. Lawson and Mr. Clement came here in the pursuit of their profession of mining engineers.
