The most distinguished of these were members of a party of English statesmen, agricultural experts and men of affairs, who, under the leadership of Sir Alfred Jones, had arrived in Kingston within the past few days to at-tend an agricultural conference there. The steamer Port Kingston will leave tomorrow with most of the members of the party who went out with Sir Alfred Jones to attend the agricultural conference. Kingston is the principal seaport and commercial city of that island. It is altuated on the south coast and on the north side of a fine harbor. The latter is a land locked basin available for the largest ships and is inclosed on the south by a long tongue of land, at the extremity of which is Port Royal. In August, 1908, Kingston and the rest of Jamaica were awept by a hurricane which almost totally destroyed Port Antonio and inflicted damage in various parts of the Island amounting to about $10,000,000. Thousands of houses in Kingston were damaged, the wharves were battered, and several coasting vessels were sunk.

The construction of the Pan-American railroad, Secretary Root prophesied, would be an accomplished fact before the lapse of many years, so that it would be possible for passengers and merchandise to travel from Maine to Buenos Ayres. He said further that one of the objects of the Rio conference last summer was to further the interest of the building of that road and that it had had its effect. He severely criticised the steamship service between this country and the South American ports and declared that subsidies alone, to meet the cheaper wages and living expenses of foreign steamship lines, could bring about a proper American merchant marine. He said patches from the state department to South America, as a rule, were forwarded via Europe, so poor was the service direct.

Continuing, he said that the attitude of the United States toward these countries could be put in three sentences: 'First, we don't want to take them urselves; second, we don't want any foreign nation to take them for themthem, and we will."

Stuart as the twenty-seventh governor of Pennsylvania was read, after which Supreme $1.48. Court Justice Fell administered the oath of office. Mr. Stuart then deliv-

"The platform upon which I was elected," the governor said, "promised many important reforms which the people had been demanding for years and which in some instances had been persistently denied them. He suggests that a state railway commission be appoint-'ed, with powers similar to those conferred upon the interstate commerce commission, advocates a maximum railroad passenger rate of 2 cents i mile and recommends that legislation be enacted to make effective that portion of the state constitution which prohibits railroads from engaging in any other business than that of common carriers.

He recommends that author ity be given him to-employ special counsel and auditors, acting under the attorney general, to appear before the committee and assist in the investigation. The state capitol cost more than 17c. $13,000,000, of which $9,000,000 was expended for decorations and furnish ings. It was asserted during the recent campaign that there were "gross overcharges" in the expenditure of the $9,000,000, and the matter has been under investigation for several months not only by the Pennypacker adminis-

When he had finished, he made his way to the carriage, which headed the inaugural parade.
