A SURVIVOR DEAD. Captain McVay Admits Deserting His Ship.

CALL CHIEF AND CREW COWARDS. The Fated Larchmont's Commander Tells His Story of Disaster, Saying Passengers Would Not Jump Into His Lifeboat.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Feb. 15.—Samuel La Combe of Manchester, N. H., one of the survivors of the wreck of the steamer Larchmont, died from the effects of exposure following the disaster at the Rhode Island hospital last night. This reduces the number of survivors to eighteen.

The statement of young Hierspell created a sensation in view of the fact that ten of the nineteen survivors were employees on the ship, or in other words, that while approximately 20 per cent of the vessel's crew was saved, only 8 per cent of the passengers survived, two women only being saved.

The boy's story is corroborated by Louis McFarlane, a negro member of the crew, who says he found Captain McVay already in the first lifeboat, to which his regular emergency duty assigned him as orsman in case of mischance.

It has become known also that the crew pushed and kicked perishing women about with great brutality as they scrambled for the boats. It is meant that the investigation shall be carried on with a view of attempting to punish the captain and possibly some of his subordinates.

Captain McVay explained that, while his boat may have been the first in the water, it was because he had a good crew and despite the fact that he was among the first of the deck he remained by his ship until she went down.

One survivor, Miss Sadie Galub of 53 Leverett street, Boston, still remains on Block Island, where she is being cared for at the home of George Milliken. She has stated that when she leaped either Captain McVay or Purser Young to take her in their boat they pushed her back, and the lifeboat left the Larchmont with only six in it, although it would have held twenty more.

DEATH HALTS COURT. Roof Garden Murder Trial Suddenly Stops.

JUROR'S WIFE DEAD OF PNEUMONIA. Justice Fitzgerald Hopes to Continue on Monday Morning, but It Will Depend on State of Recovered Husband.

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—Another tragic chapter in the history of the Thaw-White episode was written when grim death stepped in to halt the famous trial in its fourth week.

Because pneumonia caused the death of the wife of the eleventh juror, Joseph B. Bolton, the trial of Stanford White's slayer was broken off, and the remaining jurors, who had been in custody since the beginning, have been allowed to go to their homes over Sunday. It is believed that the case may be taken up again on Monday morning.

For awhile it was feared that the death of Mrs. Bolton might lead to a mistrial. Harry Thaw almost suffered a collapse at the prospect. His fears were for his wife, not for himself. But the lawyers on both sides seemed amply satisfied that the trial would go ahead after the funeral of the bereaved juror's wife.

What they had seen of Mr. Bolton's dignified, sensible behavior under the blow of his affliction convinced them that he would hold his duty as a citizen above all personal considerations and that when Monday comes he will tell the justice he is prepared to give his mind over entirely to the evidence and the arguments. Misfortune had made the little white haired juror for the time being the most conspicuous figure in the great trial.

As soon as Justice Fitzgerald had mounted the bench District Attorney Jerome arose. In a voice surcharged with feeling he said: "May it please the court, since the adjournment in the course of nature, the wife of the eleventh member of the jury has passed away. A sorrow has come into the life of this gentleman which must be borne as best it may. It is obvious that we cannot proceed. The elementary dictates of humanity demand that this case be suspended at least until Monday. That the remaining jurors should be required to remain together until that time and that the juror into whose life the sorrow has come should be required to remain under guard in the hour of his affliction are greater hardships than the state has a right to impose. Counsel on both sides have agreed that these jurors should be allowed to separate."

Dr. Britton D. Evans, superintendent of the New Jersey State Hospital for the Insane, was recalled when court opened as an alienist to continue his direct examination. The witness was asked to detail the conversations he had had on various occasions with Thaw in the Tombs. He had already declared these conversations to be an essential feature in his conclusion that Thaw was of unsound mind at the time of the doctor's first three visits to him.

START FILIBUSTER. Senators Bacon and Tillman Oppose Jap Agreement.

DEMOCRATIC LEADERS WANT TIME. Member From North Carolina Threatens Ten Day Fight Against Report—Dislikes Auto to Run Over Him.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—The sudden development of a full fledged filibuster resulted in the senate when an attempt was made to force the adoption of the conference agreement on the immigration bill. This report carries a provision intended to aid in the settlement of the California-Japanese problem, and speedy action was desired by administration senators.

Expressing sympathy with this object, yet regarding the report with suspicion on other points, Messrs. Bacon and Tillman first endeavored to have action delayed for a day that they might study the report. When this was refused the filibuster began.

Mr. Bacon held the floor for two and a half hours. Mr. Tillman remarked that he was prepared to make a ten day fight on the floor against the report, because he objected to being run over as with an automobile. Mr. Bacon objected that the report changed existing law in respects which he believed on hurried examination would deprive southern states from obtaining even the meager labor supply from abroad which was available under the present immigration laws.

A truce was declared at the suggestion of Senator Spooner, when the report will again come up for consideration. Administration senators interested in the adoption of the report were alarmed by apparent Democratic hostility. All of the Democratic leaders when questioned as to their attitude disclaimed the adoption of a party policy in regard to the report, and the senators making the objections insisted that they were actuated wholly by resentment of what they thought was an attempt to force immediate action.

Major Schmitz and his associates are awaiting the action of congress on the immigration bill and the result of Secretary Root's negotiations with the Tokyo government on the San Francisco school controversy. The exclusion provision in the bill which the administration believes will solve the coolie labor problem is said to be entirely satisfactory to the Japanese government, and another and perhaps final conference was held at the White House today, at which assurances of the passage of the bill at this session of congress said to have been given the Republican leaders were discussed.
