Sayre, Pa., March 9, 1907.

Today we enter upon our third year with even more determination and enthuslasm to give you a better store and store service than our efforts herelofore have demonstrated. Much has been accomplished by way of a gradual, healthy growth in trade, and a wider circle of patrons is recorded on our sales sheets. Our store is of more than local interest-planned for the community of today and the Sayre of 25 years from now-conceived by and pushed forward by men, many of whom you know-and it stands as a fitting triumph to the growth and prosperity of the community in which it has had a part.

We thank you for your patronage, which alone makes possible this enterprise, which is always kept free from other than clean business methods; which has a universal one-price system, selling only dependable merchandise at uniformly low prices; which is always ready and willing to rectify an error when made; the exchanging of merchandise or refunding of cash is courteously treated and willingly done when so desired.

The continuance of your patronage is solicited, and new friends are invited to put us to the test. Itespectfully yours,
