

AMERICAN DUTCH.

THE QUANT OLD COLONY IN PENNSYLVANIA.

Customs of a Domestic, Home-Loving People - Funeral Feasts-Courting Among the Young Folks.

One hundred and seventy-two years ago the Quaker Assembly of Pennsylvania ordered that none but English-speaking emigrants should be the subjects of naturalization. The same body provided a few years later that every foreigner to the English Government arriving after the passage of the act should pay a duty of forty shillings and swear allegiance to Great Britain and the province. These and other measures discouraging to prospective emigrants who fell within their scope were all aimed at the Germans. Prior to the year 1727 more than fifty thousand of them were snugly established in the Quaker province. In spite of these laws more were coming by every ship, and the followers of Penn were disturbed in spirit. But the proscribed German stolidly bided his time. He came, paid his duty and stayed. He took possession of the rich farms along the Susquehanna, the Lehigh, and the Juniata, and filled the glorious valleys which lead down to the rivers. He began to have things his own way, and when the new order was established after the Revolution, he held in his hands the political power of the great State which he had turned into a garden where the gods might dwell. The most timorous Quaker, fearful of German ascendancy, could scarcely have had a prevision of the complete triumph attained by his Teutonic rival at the beginning of the present century. The Quaker was already little more than a memory; the German the potent fact of the social and political order. But lo! when the victor proclaimed his conquest it was in a strange tongue; he no longer thought nor felt as a German. The Fatherland was not beyond seas, but here. Germany was no more to him than it was to Patrick. He had become a Pennsylvania Dutchman.

These people have retained all the admirable domestic, home-loving characteristics of the race from which they sprung. No wives are more loyal, no mothers more devoted to their children, than these. Among the young people the singing-school is a weekly entertainment during the winter, and dancing is held in favor.

No event calls out so large a number of people as a funeral. The moment one of the family dies the survivors begin to bake and cook and gather supplies. There is little time for grief; the funeral is but three days off at most, and if there should be any skimping of the feast, to which the minister will be authorized to invite from the pulpit all the friends of the family, it would be disrespectful to the dead and discreditable to the living. And there, too, must be prepared the mid-night lunch for the watchers who will guard the remains. Two young men of the neighborhood will be detailed for this purpose, and it will be their privilege to select the two young ladies who are to help them while away the long hours. In a room adjoining that in which the body is lying these watchers assume themselves in whatever way they choose. Every hour the young men enter the death-chamber and look upon the features of him who sleeps the eternal sleep; while the two girls, awed and nervous at being alone so near the visible presence of death, tremblingly wait the return of their gallant companions. It is a beautiful custom, that of watching over the dead, and characteristic of a reverent and affectionate race. Yet it must be confessed that owing to the presence of the young ladies the watchers generally manage to extract more pleasure out of it than is consistent with its solemnity. It will be found that the abundant preparation of "funeral baked meats" has been timely enough. As soon as the service is ended at the grave all the assemblage returns to the house, and the feasting ends not until the last neighbor has gorged himself as only a Pennsylvania Dutchman can on a holiday. Hundreds of them partake of these funeral feasts, and they regard it as a matter of pride when the number is larger than usual.

The Pennsylvania Dutch young man rarely takes a lady to church or singing school. When the meeting is ended the young men hurry out and stand in a row, or a double row on each side of the walk. When the girl of his choice comes by, the young man steps up with assumed boldness and a display of confidence not warranted by his feelings and shoves out his elbow. Sometimes she pulls back her arm with a contemptuous little jerk and a saucy toss of the head, to the great joy of a luckier fellow further down the line; while the rejected swain steps back into his place to undergo an unmerciful gazing and wait for another with whom he hopes to be more successful. But as a rule they know what they are doing, and the throng melts away with few such incidents.

The young man has somewhat more than the pleasure of walking home with the lady. He is generally invited into the house. If the old people have not already retired, they will obligingly do so very soon. Etiquette would hardly permit him to leave before two or three o'clock in the morning, but, etiquette or no etiquette, he rarely leaves before the first named hour. This performance is known as "settin up" with each other. It does not imply a marriage engagement between the parties, but is rather the method by which the desirability of such an engagement is determined.

A young lady would not lose her reputation in the slightest degree by taking a trip of a week, say to New York, Philadelphia, or Washington, with a young man. It is by no means unusual. And it may be said, too, as a rule, that the young people are worthy of the prodigious confidence reposed in them. These, and indeed all the customs mentioned, are those of a confiding people, a widely scattered population making the best of their few social opportunities.

As a people, with language, customs and traditions peculiar to themselves, they are rapidly passing away. Although this blood is the best strength of nearly three million Pennsylvanians and of something like a million more in other States, there remains but a few thousand families—probably twenty-five thousand families—of the old unchanged stock, such as we have been portraying here. The rest, through intermarriage and long association with the dominant race, have lost their peculiarities, and are indistinguishable from them, unless it be by reason of their greater patience, confidence and steadfastness of purpose.—New York World.

The Sledge and the Deer.

The body of the sledge, which the reindeer pulls, is placed very high on a pair of long thin runners, having a gradual curve and projecting about four feet beyond the actual sledge, so that they break the shock when the sledge is being driven over rough ground. All the parts of the sledge are lashed together with reindeer skin thongs, and it is owing to the great elasticity and pliancy thereby given to the whole fabric that these flimsy constructions resist the very rough treatment to which they are as a rule subjected. The method of harnessing the deer is of the simplest; a broad leather hoop passes round the neck; to this is fastened the long thong, which serves as a trace, and which passes down the chest between the fore legs and out between the hind legs. The driving is done with a single rein, which is fastened to a crooked piece of bone or wood, fastened immediately over the ball of the eye, one of the tenderest parts in the reindeer, and which, if scientifically jerked to the right or left, causes the animal to answer to the rein very quickly. The outside deer on the near side is the only one provided with this arrangement, and the biggest and oldest deer are always placed in this responsible position, the others being kept to their work by the "chave," or long driving pole. A good "leading" deer is the most valuable of a Samoyede's possessions, and will often cost as much as three or four ordinary deer. The usual number of deer harnessed to a sledge is three, but this, of course, varies according to the weight carried, age of the deer, etc.—Murray's Magazine.

Making Neckties for Men.

"Neckties are made out of grades and designs of silks and satins made specially for that purpose," said a manufacturer to a reporter for the New York Mail and Express recently. "These materials are made from patterns designed by men who do nothing but study up new things in neckties. There are in this country from fifty to seventy-five factories and ten or twelve first-class makers. The latter usually secure exclusive rights to certain styles of goods from the makers by buying either the entire stock offered to the American market or a large portion of it. The success of 'making up' these goods, though, is just like a chance in a lottery."

"Are the styles of making up neckties originated abroad?"

"Not now. They were until a few years ago, but now our styles are superior to the European, and they often come over here for our patterns. However, there is a tendency for English fashions for the fall."

"Who are employed in making the neckties, men or women?"

"Women. There are more than 1200 thus employed in New York city alone. They are all on piece-work, and make more or less money according to their expertness. A good finisher can make $8 or $9 a week. She takes a necktie after it is put together and finishes each detail perfectly, so that it is ready to box. The finishers must see that all of this kind are exactly alike in point of finish and make-up. "We have one girl who does nothing but turn the bands of neckties, and she makes $15 a week. She turns twenty-five or thirty dozen bands a day."

The fastest time made by a railroad train between New York and Chicago was made by the Jarrett and Palmer train in 1876. The time was about twenty hours. The fastest regular time is between New York and Philadelphia—ninety miles in 2-20, including stops.

Alaska presents the anomalous condition of being a Territory of the United States without a territorial government, having no laws except Treasury regulations, no political subdivisions, but a customs district, with a collector and the necessary subordinate officials.

There is a lady in Milwaukee, Wis., who is the mother of nine children. None of them was named until it was twelve years old. They were simply called by their nicknames and numbers, "One," "Two," etc. When they were twelve years old each chose his own name and was baptized.

Captain Hall, the Arctic navigator, perished from the effects of the severe climate in the winter of 1874. His crew cut his grave in the ice, and the first mate read the service from his prayer book. The seasons have destroyed every vestige of his burial place, and the spot will never be found.

Lightning Melts a Girl's Hat Rim.

J. C. Abernathy, who resides several miles east of Dennison, Texas, had a thrilling experience at his house on a recent night during a severe storm. "There are three cedar trees growing in the front yard near the house," he says. "The largest of the three was struck by lightning, when a ball of fire seemed to dance before the window. The lightning went from the top of the roof and ripped up the shingles. It then descended to the ceiling in the front room and tore the clock into pieces. Standing near the clock was a sewing machine. The lightning melted the large wheel, and after this performance it melted the metallic rim which encircled a girl's hat. The fluid then went through the floor, burning a large hole. Mrs. Sherrill, who was sitting in another room, was prostrated by the shock."

The scientist, Edison, sleeps four hours a day and eats very little.

A Blue Lobster.

A genuine blue lobster of good size has been captured at Marshfield, Mass. Nothing of the sort has been found before in those waters, although a case was reported some years ago from Long Island Sound. This lobster is of a pure ultramarine blue of handsome shade. Along the back the color of this singular crustacean is almost as dark as indigo, but at the sides it is as light as a robin's egg, and in the joints of the shell shades away to a delicate cream color. In an ordinary lobster these parts would be shaded in dark and light greens. The claws of the blue lobster are slightly mottled in shades of blue and purple on top and a most delicate cream underneath. The lobster car has been a center of interest for the curious since the capture. It was caught in an ordinary pot, and it differs in no way except in color from other lobsters. It will be boiled for the sake of seeing to what color it will turn during the process.—New York Times.

Curd of Thanks.

If the proprietor of Kemp's Balsam should publish a card of thanks, containing expressions of gratitude which come to him daily, from those who have been cured of severe throat and lung troubles by the use of Kemp's Balsam, it would fill a fair-sized book. How much better to invite all to call on any druggist and get a free sample bottle than you may test for yourself its power. Large bottles 50c. and $1.

Take Off His Under Lip.

Eight years ago a cancer came on my lower lip. I had it cut out while it was yet small, and it healed up apparently, but soon broke out again, and commenced eating very rapidly. It took off my under lip from one side to the other, and down to my chin. I had it treated by burning, and got so weak that I did not think that I could stand it much longer. After much suffering I discarded all other treatment, and began taking Swift's Specific, and the cancer soon began to heal, and in a short time it was completely healed and I was entirely well. It is now over three years since I got well, and there has been no sign of any return of the disease. I know it was cancer, and I know it was cured alone by S. S. S. E. V. FRISAN, Kingston, La.

S. S. S. cured me of malignant sore throat and mouth, caused by impure blood. The trouble extended down to my left lung, which was very sore. The doctors practiced on me for three years without relief, when I left them and took S. S. S. Four bottles cured me. BEN RILEY, Meridian, Miss.
