An Old Democrat Asks For Information.

I am a Democrat. I believe in the party's principles and revere its traditions. Since I have had a vote I always voted the Democratic with a clear conscience. I was true in this county in '84 at considerable personal sacrifice of my own interest. I have in many campaigns, both in this county and elsewhere, defended the principles and advocated the cause of Democracy. Suppose in advocating the election of John Utz, I was confronted by some staunch Democrat through the county, a man, let us say, who has always stuck to the ticket, contributed money and devoted his best energies for the cause, and that when the party was finally successful he had been recommended by friends of our party of his district for some local office of which he was abundantly qualified to fill. Suppose then that he was refused the office on grounds that money is King, and the office bestowed upon a Mugwump in the neighborhood or left in the possession of the Republican incumbent. And suppose some old honest Democrat should come to me and ask this question: "Why must I vote for John Utz? If I answer, because of party obligation, and he answered, "When did John Utz regard party obligations as binding on him? What answer could I make?"

Now this is a query that is likely to be addressed to every Democratic advocate of his party, and for myself, I shall decline to work for the full ticket until I am convinced whether I am voting for a Democrat or a Mugwump. Yours in Democratic bonds.
MEDEA.
Lopez, Pa., Oct. 15th.

Mr. Editor:—The column editorial in the Gazette on the Prohibition Convention is, to one who knows the author, rather inconsistent. "An outrage not only upon the Prohibitionists but upon a civilized and christian community," was instituted by himself, and because he failed in carrying out his little scheme he bellows and whines. He puts me in mind of the fox in a little fable I read recently. A fox had run a rabbit for a long time, and the rabbit, finally, to seek a place of safety jumped into an empty bucket hanging in a well that had another bucket at the other end of the rope, so fastened to a windlass, that when he got in the bucket his weight brought the empty bucket to the top. The fox seeing him down in the well thought he certainly could capture him by getting in the other bucket and going down after him, which he did bringing the rabbit to the top and staying at the bottom himself.

Now this was exactly the case with the author of the editorial (not Streby's); a Democrat Prohibitionist, any thing for boodle man, who went into the Convention not honestly nor conscientiously, nor with the intention of supporting the Prohibition party nor its principles, but merely intending to defeat the Republican candidate for Sheriff, and also to put a man in the field for the office of Prothonotary against the Democratic nominee, that he might have the opportunity to bleed him.

To the writers own knowledge this man declared before the Prohibition Convention was held that the time was not ripe for him to support the Prohibition ticket.

Now I would like to know if Mr. Streby thinks it is more inconsistent for a man like Daniel T. Huckell to go into a Prohibition Convention and pledge himself to support the Prohibition ticket, than it is for A. Logan Grim to go in and pledge himself, and take up an hours time in advising the Prohibitionists what they should do.

It is a well known fact that Mr. Huckell has been a life long temperance man, and has always worked for the interest of the temperance cause and done that which has seemed to him to be most beneficial to the cause. He took a firm stand in the Constitutional Amendment and made speeches through the county without price, but Grim was paid, possibly not as much as his eloquence merited, but certainly for all the work he did.

The oldest and best known Prohibitionists, those who organized the party in the county and have been its pillars of strength, were not in favor of making a county nomination, and it was not done. Now I ask all fair minded men, who should have the control, true party men, or those who have gone into the party because they could not get a county or federal office.

The Republican State Committee offers handsome silk banners to the two counties showing the nearest relative approach to the Harrison vote of 1888. Every county has an equal chance for this prize—large and small.

The feeling of security prevailing among Republicans is greatly to be deplored. They say we have a "walkover." This is our greatest danger. Apathy—naturally consequent upon over-confidence—may defeat our candidate for State Treasurer. Unless we can arouse our people to the importance of energetic work, we are likely to find ourselves in the minority on the morning of November 6th. Let us get to work without delay!

This is what people call an "off year." That is an unfortunate expression. There should be no such thing as an "off year." A few days hence we elect a State Treasurer, an official who collects and disburses $10,000,000 and one who has supervision over $20,000,000 of the State's money. Is not this an important office, and is it proper to call this an "off year?"

Republican defeat in Pennsylvania in 1889 is possible from one cause only—over-confidence—which necessarily breeds apathy. Our recent great majorities in this State are a source of danger in a campaign like this, as they are apt to make us relax our efforts. The Democrats have inaugurated and are prosecuting an effective "Still Hunt," and they hope to succeed through Republican over-confidence and indifference. To make success certain we must get down to the hardest kind of work. If we get the idea that this is an "Off Year," and base our efforts upon that conclusion, we may frankly speaking, be badly "left."

An Altoona detective went to Philadelphia and while there was victimized by a couple of bunco sharpers who relieved him of $27, all the money he had. And they did it in the regular old chestnut way. One of them met him on the street and shook hands with him and made him believe he knew him, and then they went to a saloon and got a drink and the second sharper rushed up with an express bill and sharper No. 1 hadn't the money, and the Altoona detective loaned him $27, and the sharper gave him a worthless check for $704 as security until to-morrow, and then they parted and the next day the sharper didn't come around to the hotel with the $27, as he agreed, and when the Altoona man came to investigate the $804 check wasn't worth two hurrahs, and he a detective too. Oh my!

Jefferson Davis is reported to have one hundred thousand acres of land for sale. However attached the distinguished rebel may have been to the Lost Cause, he does not want any Confederate bonds for it. Not any.

The Solid South Heptess.

The result of the elections in the new States of North Dakota, Washington and Montana, ought to convince the people of the Southern States that they cannot possibly gain anything by keeping that section solidly Democratic by force and violence. With four new States added to the Republican column it will be more difficult than ever before for the solid South to secure control of the national government. The Senate is now hopelessly beyond the reach of solid Southern dominance, and after the next Congressional apportionment it will be next to impossible for the South to control the House of Representatives, as she did in the Fifth and several preceding Congresses. There is to-day only a single Northern State that can be certainly counted upon as a re-inforcement of the solid South, and that is new Jersey New York, Indiana and Connecticut are always as likely to go Republican as Democratic.

Ever since the close of the war and the rehabilitation of the Confederate States, the South has been reaching out for the same absolute dominance of the national government which that section enjoyed in the days of slavery, and which was lost by the rebellion. There is no longer any hope of that dream being realized. The Senate is hopelessly beyond the reach of the South and the House of Representatives soon will be. The North will henceforth dominate the national government and will continue that dominance until the South ceases to be solid as the result of violence, force and fraud.

A Solid Delegation.

It is now definitely ascertained that the four new States have elected a solid Republican delegation to the House of Representatives of the Fifty-first Congress, giving the Republicans eight majority in that body. There is still a little uncertainty as to the political complexion of the Montana legislature, on which depends the election of two United States Senators. So far as political power in the Senate is concerned, it is, however, unimportant whether the two Montana Senators are Republicans or Democrats. If Republicans then the majority will be ten; if Democrats the majority will be six; and when a Republican succeeds Senator Payne, of Ohio, the majority will be eight.

The election in Montana is a trifle mixed as to its results, but at future elections that new State will turn right side up. She is bound to become reliably Republican, if she is not quite so now. The election of all Republican Representatives to the Fifty-first Congress by the four new States is most gratifying and was above all else the most valuable and desirable of the fruits gathered. The addition of these five Representatives gives the Republicans a safe enough majority and now there can be no difficulty in effecting the organization of the House and the Republicans will be able to do a good many things which would have been attended with difficulty had there been only a majority of three. The new States have done nobly and the Republican faith in them has not been disappointed.

A pointer to Republican poll-workers: After you think every Republican voter can be secured has been looked after, scan your list closely to see if there isn't one more who can be brought to the polls. Every vote counts. Many a man has been elected by a majority of one. Let your motto on election day be "one vote more."

The State Sunday School Convention, as a result of the meeting in Williamsport, has determined upon active work in the future. The Executive Committee were empowered to employ a State Secretary, and were entrusted with a power to fix his salary. This gives them a discretion, which the committee will fully exercise, to obtain the best man to be held for the position.

Nearly every precinct in the county was represented at the presentation of the banner on Wednesday. There were one hundred and fifty people present.

Uncle Tom's Cabin will be played in the Laporte Hall Friday evening, Oct. 18th. The play is said to be first class. All are invited. Price 35c, children 15c.
