RECARDING THE CENSUS WORK Individual And Corporation In-

The interest in the approaching time of census taking, and the completeness with which the work is to be done, has awakened considerable inquiry. The census is designed to be much more complete in all respects than any ever before taken, and while the general outline of the work has been published, many things are not yet undertood. This is particularly the case in the inquiry into the recorded indebtednss of private individuals and corporations, and the statistics of farms, homes and mortgages.

At the census office in Washington there have been received thousands of letters asking for information on the subject. and Robert P. Porter, Superintendent of Census, has issued a bulletin in reply to a Senate resolution to have the matter more fully set forth and explained. The inquiry particularly concerns only answers to five questions. They are the following: Is the house you live in hired, or is it owned by the head or by a member of the family? If owned by head or member of the family, is the house free from mortgage incumbrance? If the the head of the family is a farmer, is the farm which he cultivates hired or is it owned by him or by a member of his family? If owned by member or head of tamily, is the farm free from mortgage incumbrance? If the farm or house is owned by head or member of family and mortgaged, give the postoflice address of owner.

Speaking of these questions, Mr. Porter says that it is impossible to secure reliable data in relation to or the amount of private indebtedness of individuals directly through the medium of enumerators. The particular points touching the imconcering the ownership of property are emphasized in the report made by Gen. Francis A. Walker in 1879. abandonment of the interrogatory relating to the ownership of the public debt, General Walker ealled attention to the fact that the questions on the population schedule would often have to be answered by the women of the family in the temporary or protracted absence of the head thereof, and that it is difficult to obtain accurate information except from the head of the family respecting the investment of the family property. Even when the head of the family is present, the direct inquiry of an enumerator respecting bow much the head of the family and in the end only secure partial Congress decided by the act of February 27, 1890, that the enumerators should simply be called upon to secure information which will enable the census office, by correspondence and ultimately by special agents, to give the facts required. Mr. Porter says: "There are several advantages to this method. The office will be able to tabulate and give to the country in a comparatively short time the number of persons in each county who owns the house they occupy and the farms they cultivate, the number of people who are tenants of their homes and farms, the number of all owned and tenanted farms and homes which are mortgaged, and the number free from mortgage incumbrance. If the enumerator performs his duty in accordance with the instructions hereinafter appended the postoffice address of every person owning and occupying a mortgaged home or farm will be in the possession of the census office, together with the order continued.

Addresses of all owners of farms and Mead vs Mead—Subpoena in di-homes in cases where a doubt exists as to whether said farms and homes are mortgaged or not. It should be borne in mind that these addresses. unlike those obtained from the real estate records by abstractors in search of mortgaged indebtedness, and referred to hereafter, will not be subject to any considerable change in the short time clapsing between their collections and the forwarding from the census office of the circular of inquiry. As the law provides a penalty of $100 for a refusal to answer these questions, it is believed that a very large percentage of the circulars which will be sent from this office as soon as the poulation schedules are returned will be answered forthwith. It is not likely that these circulars will be required before July, so they have not as yet been formulated. It is the intention, bowever, to include such questions as will elicit the amount of mortgaged indebtedness due upon every mortgaged home and farm occupied by the owner, the value of the mortgaged property, the rate of interest borne by the debt the causes and purposes of the indebtedness. and such other information as may be obtainable will aid in making this inquiry as complete as possible."

Other advantage is found in the fact that the enumerator is a local man and mostly known to the person to whom inquiry is directed. It is therefore fair to assume that the persons called upon who are in debt will more cheerfully answer questions on a blank sent to them by the Superintendent of Census than they will the local enumerator.

Once the enumerators forward to Washington the postoffice address of people who are in debt, or have their farms and houses mortgaged, and the matter of getting accurate statistics will be reduced to a simple plan.

The results to be obtained are important. The financial transactions of the people, as far as indicated by recorded mortgages, will be ascertained for the ten years from 1880 agricultural land and the number of real estate holdings by States and minor civil divisions which have mortgage debt placed upon those the value and ownership of property, two classes of real estate by years and by counties will be ascertained. The amount of mortgage debt existing on January 1, 1890, upon agricultural land and upon village and city real estate will also be obpracticability of securing or expect-ing to secure from the women of these statistics of general interest, the household accurate information the growth of business of building and loan associations will be disclosed. The causes of debt and purposes of mortgages will be sought for and an endeavor made In the report referred to, urging the to ascertain whether they have resulted from misfortune or enterprise in business. Chattel mortgages will not be dealt with.

Mr. Porter, in his census bulletin to Congress, gives many facts of interest to all classes of people, and sums up by saying that it is the purpose of the office to make the investigation through and as nearly accurate as may be, to the end that the eleventh census may show the actual situation of the people in respect of financial prosperity, and may furnish toundation for comparison with the results of censuses to be taken in the tuture.
