More Poultry Raising.

Farmers are now, and for some years have been, casting about them very earnestly to ascertain whether special crops and more diversified farming may not tend to make their persuit more profitable. One thing fter another has been suggested after another has been suggested, but there doesn't seem to be enough money in any one thing to turn the tide strongly in the right direction. Under these circumstances it is wise not to turn away from the minor farm industries as measures of relief. of relief.

Of all these, there is none that seems to suggest itself so strongly as poultry raising on an enlarged scale. In the first place, it is al-ready an industry on all farms to a greater or less extent. The average farmer's wife and sons and daughters have a practical acquaintance with the details, and they are, therefore, not venturing into an untried field. What they do not know they will actual experience in the acquire by course of time.

There is no artice in greater demand in our markets than fresh eggs and poultry, and often the supply is far below what is called for. Be-sides, it has been steadily growing from year to year, and must continue to grow as time rolls on. The same may be said of the egg sup-ply. It is true that during several months of the year their great abundance sends down the price to very low figures, but during most of the year the prices are remauerative. The consumption of this ex-cellent food is largely on the in-crease and millions of dollars worth tive. are annually imported. No country in the world is better prepared by nature to produce poultry and eggs, and we ought to take advantage of our opportunities. We believe the raising of turkeys, if carefully and systematically fol-lowed in this locality, might be made the means of adding very con-siderably to the farmer's income. During the present season turkeys have been unusually scarce in this lacality and have commanded high prices, but even at the unusual rates asked the supply has been all too short. Last season was favor-able to turkey raising and the supable to turkey raising and the sup-ply was fully up to the average, but we understand tons of these birds were sent to the large citles both from the southern and northern portions of the country. There is little more difficulty in raising half a dozen or a dozen broods of turkeys on a farm than one cr two. To do this as well as to double the chicken duck or goose products on a farm, will as a matter of course require additional care and attention on the part of the farmer's family. The cash and wealth in the poss sion of Robert Ray Hamilton at the time of his death will remain in the Hamilton family. Eva, his would-be wife was pronounced Mrs. Mann in the Serrogate court at N. Y., on Thursday last, hence is not entitled to any of his estate. This ends one of the most interesting sensations of the day.

A telegram from Wilkes-Barre, under date of the 19th inst., gives the following particulars of a rather romantic affair, where a husband returns after many years absence and finds his wife married to another; and finally consents to draw "cuts" to see which shall have the wife: William Evans and Maggie Williams were married at Tamaqua. A few years later Evans sold out his business and went to Colorado. Two children had been borne to the couple. For two years Evans worked in Colorado mines and sent money to his wife monthly. Then he fell ill, was taken to a hospital, he fell ill, was taken to a hospital, and that was the last his wife heard of him till some months later when she received a newspaper containing a notice of her husband's death. Mrs. Evans removed to Wilkes-Barre to keep house for an uncle and here in the spring of 1889 she was married to Joe S. Jenkins, who is well to do. One child was born to them. Friday last Mrs. Jenkins heard a knock at her door and sent her oldest girl to open it. A well dressed man who stood in the doorway said to the girl : "Is your mam-ma in and is she all alone?" He was told Mrs. Jenkins was at home was told Mrs. Jenkins was at nome and he walked in. Mrs. Jenkins at once recognized him as her first husband and fainted. Evans sub-sequently explained that it was another Evans whose death his wife had read of. When Jenkins came home the men talked the matter over und as Mrs. Evans-Jeaks said she loved them both, they decided to draw straws to see which should re-tain the place of husband. The woman agreed. The straws were down and Evans more Husband woman agreed. The straws were drawn and Evans won. Husband No. 2 at once packed np all his be-longings and moved out of the were drawn and Evans wore due to the benefit of oreditors of R. B. Warburton, will exprese by order of court at Public Sale on the premises in the Borough of Forksville, Sullivan County, Fa., on longings and moved out of the house. Mrs. Evans still retains possession of his child with his consent. Early this week Evans will remove his family to Denver. The affair has created no little excitement.
