HAMILTON IS ALIVE.

He Seeks Oblivion and a New Life

"Robert Ray Hamilton is alive and in good health. He is in Sydney, New South Wales. He is beginning life anew there under an assumed name. He has east behind him the past, and is looking hopefully forward toward the fu-

This is what a friend of the sup posed dead husband of Eva Hamilton said last night. This man is in a position to know, and he speaks by authority, for in his pocket were several letters signed by Robert Ray Hamilton since his alleged death by accidental drowning in the Snake river, Nez Perces county. Idaho. This gentleman was a playmate, a schoolmate and a collegemate of the great-grandson of the financier of the early Republic, Alexander Hamilton. After their graduation these two friends separgraduation these two friends separated, but down to the present time they have kept alive a boyhood friendship and a college correspondence. Robert Ray Hamilton, with abundant wealth at his command and prestige of an illustrions name, sought distinction in his native State. His friend became an officer in the United States news and ficer in the United States navy and recently distinguished himself on the coast survey service by discovering the true source of the mysterious Gulf Stream.

A DEVOTED FRIEND.

When Eva Hamilton stabbed Nurse Donnelly at Atlantic City this old-time friend of the disgraced husband was the first to fly to his assistance. During the trying times that preceded the conviction of the mad adventuress who had dragged the name of a noble family into the mire, this friend stood at Ray Hamilton's elbow and encouraged him with words of sympathy and advice.

Af the trial and conviction of the woman Hamilton had married this woman Hamilton had married this man still stood by his school-boy friend, and it was through his advice that Hamilton purchased the ranche on Snake river. During the time that Hamilton spent on the ranche he corresponded frequently with his friend, and in a letter dated several days previous to his alleged dramatic death, he used these words:

A SIGNIFICANT MESSAGE.

"You may hear something that ill aprise you. If I leave hear only it will be for reasons best own to myself."

It did not surprise this friend of that Hamilton's then, when he heard that the man's dead body had been found in Snake river and buried in a desolate Idaho canyon. He waited patiently and presently there came a letter in the familiar hand writing of his friend deted at Son Francisco. of his friend, dated at San Francisc a letter in the laminar hand writing of his friend, dated at San Francisco.

In this letter Hamilton, without referring in any manner to the reports that had been published of his death, simply stated that he was about taking a steamer for Japan and that he would go thence to Australia, where, under an assumed name, which he gave, he would begin a new life. At the close of the letter was this significant paragraph:

By the time this reaches will be a dead man. I am dead—dead to every hope and ambition that I ever entertained. In a new world and under a new name I hope to reach the goal toward which I saimed and lost,

HARDY ANY WAR NAW WARE TOWN.

HAPPY IN HIS NEW HOME.

"It would be a breach of sacred confidence to disclose Ray Hamilton's name and present abode," said this friend last night. "No man of any sense would believe the stories that have been printed of his death. Ray Hamilton was a proud and sensitive man and he felt the disgrace that was brought upon him keenly. Is it strange, then, that he wished to be dead to the world? He will probably never return to this country. If he does so it will be incognito. I can assure you of this fact that he is happy in his new home and thankful that he has escaped from the sign like that caped from the siren-like enthraldom of the woman whom, in a mis guided moment, he made his lawful wife."

If you want to turn over a new leaf turn to the right. When driving along the highway or walking the streets remember the same rule. The rule of the road in America is to turn to the right. It is a good rule to follow in all cases, prevents confusion and collision; promotes sweetness of temper, as well as doing justly by your fellow man. He who turns the other way goes wrong and is left.
