How Indians Judge White Men.

"The suspicion in an Indian of a white man is greatly due to the former actions of the whites toward him. He knows we have no love for him, and our treatment of his people tends to make him dislike us. To illustrate this: I was sitting down talking to an Indian once when an army doctor came up rubbing his head, as he had the headache. The Indian looked at him and asked me what we the parter with the dector. I tald was the matter with the doctor. I told him that he was sick. He kept silent a moment, then said the doctor was no moment, then said the doctor was no good if he were sick and could not cure himself. Rather rough on the doctor, but nevertheless he was very near the truth. So they judge us as they see us, and I have often known them to put up with treatment from whites that a white was well released against. The white man would rebel against. The white man would be said to be of independent spirit. If the Indian rebelled he would be said to be bloodthirsty and wanting to cause trouble. That is the difference in the judgment passed on the white and the red man for the same offense. Is that right? The sooner they are put under the control of the War Department and United States army officers put on the agencies as agents and quartermasters and a regular system of discipline established with them, giving them what the Government provides and punishing white and Indian alike for wrong-doings, the sooner you will put a stop to Indian outbreaks."—Washington Star.

A Stream of Words.

Everybody knows in a general way how much more talk than work is done in the world, but few people realize the fact until it is reduced to figures. A speaker of average rapidity will use about 100 words a minute, and in con-versation the rate is about the same. Now suppose the average talker talks four hours a day, he will repeat 24,000 words each day, equal to twelve col-umns of the Globe, or to forty-eight pages of a book of ordinary size. In a year he will have uttered words that will fill 17,520 pages, or thirty-five volumes of 500 pages each, and in thirty years 1050 volumes will be filled with the nothings that are said from moment to moment. This calculation is for a man; for a woman, of course, the figures would be at least doubled.—Globe-

"On the contrary, good sense. A mustache acts as a sieve for the air. It is something like a French respiratorwarming the air before the latter is taken into the lungs. In the same fashion, relatively, the beard acts as a protection for the throat. If you cut off that mus-tache you will not only catch cold, but since your lungs are weak you may again be taken down by your old malady, pleurisy. Hence I say, a mustache or beard keep a man warm in winter and cool in summer .- Detroit Free Press.

A "Punkin-Head."

New Haven, Conn., is celebrated for having given the name of "Punkin-Head" to all New Englanders. It originated from the Blue Laws, which enjoined every male to have his hair cut round by a cap. When caps were not to be had they substituted the hard shell of the "punkin," which, being put on the head every Saturday, all hair which protruded was clipped close to the shell's edge. Peters, in his "History of Connecticut," says: "What religious virtue was supposed to be derived from the custom, I know not; but there is much prudence in it; first, it prevents the hair from snarling; secondly, it saves the use of combs; and, thirdly, it cannot incommode the eyes by falling over them; and, fourthly, such persons as have lost their ears for heresy and other wickedness cannot conceal their misfortune and disgrace."—St. Louis Republic.
